ONE DEAD, SIX OVERCOME, TOLL OF INTENSE HEAT

How to keep cool is aptly illustrated by three-year-old Ancie Dorio of No. 160 Salem street. Ice cakes and ice-cream cones have no terrors for little Ancie.

Schools in Dedham, Cambridge, Concord, Lexington, Arlington and Lawrence were closed at noon today because of the excessive heat. At Lawrence many shops closed. The streets in the tenement district were flushed.

One death and six prostrations was the toll taken by the intense heat today, the hottest June 4 in the history of the weather bureau.

COLLISION OCCURS IN FOG

Imperator Crushes Bow of Shipping Board Liner Agwidale: Both Proceed After Crash

By International News Service.

New York, June 4.—The giant army transport Imperator, second largest ship afloat, collided head on with the cargo-carrying steamer Agwidale, operated by the United States Shipping Board, about forty-eight miles northeast of Nantucket Lightship in a heavy fog at 2 o'clock this morning.

A wireless message said that neither vessel was seriously damaged and both were proceeding under their own steam. No one was injured.

The Imperator put to sea yesterday after discharging troops from France and was returning to the other side. The Agwidale was bound for New York from Rotterdam. Her bow was crushed in, but her captain wireless ed she would be able to reach port.

The transport Tiger steadily hugs ships until the extent of the accident was ascertained.

HOUSE KILLS BILL TO AID HEROES TO FARMS

Although admitting that agriculture in this state is rapidly declining and that 6,000,000 acres of land formerly under cultivation are now lying idle, the House of Representatives today killed the bill appropriating $500,000 to encourage returning soldiers back to the farm.

The bill had been introduced by Senator Loring of Beverly and had passed the Senate. Its purpose was to stimulate agriculture, to provide homes for soldiers at a reasonable cost and to raise food against the high cost of living.

Representative Spinney of Weymouth, urging the passage of the bill asserted that 400 applications have been received from soldiers for employment or aid on the farms.

STATE MAY GIVE PLOT REWARD

Governor Coolidge Considers Aid to Police; Wilson Orders Relentless Pursuit

A cabled order from President Wilson for the utmost Federal pursuit of the bomb-plotters, the indication of a State reward for the Boston bombers, grilling of James Larkin, the well known radical and former Irish syndicalist by Cleveland police, and the mention of William Haywood, president of the I. W. W., in the Pittsburgh investigation were features of today's developments in the nation-wide probe of the outrages.

That a State reward will be offered for the capture of the "most outlawed" guilty of the bomb outrages was indicated by Governor Coolidge this afternoon. He stated that he had the offer under consideration.

He said he felt that additional rewards would stir the police to the greatest activity and would encourage volunteers to aid the grand jury now being spread over the country.

Governor Coolidge has found that there is ample precedent for offering a reward. The late Governor Draper offered rewards for the apprehension of plotters and Governor Coolidge himself, at the suggestion of the Putnam went into the French service in March, 1917. He was taken into the United States Aviation Service on June 10, 1918. On April 6 he had four official victories over German airplanes to his credit and he was awarded the Croix de Guerre on April 24.

Crowley on Stand Tells of Admission by Prisoner Held in Slaying

Attorney Thomas F. Murphy was seen leaving the apartment house at No. 1412 Commonwealth avenue in which Herman L. Barney was concealed on the night that the alleged murderer escaped from the Charles Street Jail, according to two witnesses in Brighton Court today. The testimony was the most important introduced in the trial of the lawyer, accused of being accessory to Barney's breaking out of jail.

The witnesses swearing to this were Mrs. Celia Bridge, an investigator hired by W. W. Dow, private detective, and her assistant, Alice K. Keller. They occupied Suite 9 in the same apartment house with Mrs. Lillian Ashenden at the Commonwealth avenue address.

WILSON DEMANDS RELENTLESS HUNT FOR BOMB PLOTTERS

HAYWOOD'S NAME LINKED WITH TERRORIST CAMPAIGN

State police, has recently made small offers in minor police cases.

Governor Coolidge said he was convinced that the money could be used from the Governor's emergency or contingency fund.

A Paris cable said that President Wilson this afternoon directed every agency of the United States government to unite to the utmost to run down the authors of Monday night's bomb outrages in the United States and to secure complete punishment for those found guilty. At the same time the President telegraphed his warmest congratulations to Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer and the others on their escapes.

SUSPECTS FOR SOVIET.

The Cleveland dispatch relating the police arrest of James Larkin said that the questioning was in connection with the bomb plot investigation in that city. Larkin stopped over at Cleveland yesterday while en route from Chicago to New York.

The Cleveland police also tried to establish some connection between John Johnson, I. W. W. leader, arrested in Pittsburgh, and Cleveland. Johnson is reported to have indicated that the bombs were manufactured in Cleveland.

Police investigation today developed the fact that twenty-eight of the suspects rounded up were smuggled into this country via Buffalo and Niagara Falls without going through the immigration office. Most of them are of Russian birth and frankly admit they favor the soviet form of government.

Federal officials conferred with Cleveland police department heads today. It was reported that deportation would follow the disclosure that the men were smuggled into the country without passing the immigration authorities.

John Johnson, a Pittsburgh dispatch said, arrived in that city a few weeks ago at the instance of "No. 1091" from No. 132 East Fifteenth street, New York, according to Superintendent of Detectives Faherty of Pittsburgh police.

"No. 1091" is the pass number, the police say, which William Haywood, president of the I. W. W. bears. Superintendent Faherty said Johnson was to be an organizer in the mines in the Pittsburgh district. Secret service men declared that Johnson had been under surveillance in New York and that he was trailed to Pittsburgh.

TRAIL BOMB MAKER.

The bomb-maker named by Johnson was said to be living in Pittsburgh. He is said to have been one of the Bolshevik leaders in Russia w[illegible] started there.

Another man who may have an interesting case, and said [illegible] ed by Johnson, is Cleveland a few days ago.

It is reported [illegible]

Crooks of the Pittsburgh police said today that they believed the [illegible] cases there would be in a fair way to a solution.

The bombmaker, according to the police, is an Irishman, aged thirty-three years. A search of his home today yielded nothing incriminating, but the officers found a picture of the man sought. This picture was identified by neighbors as the occupant of the house. They also learned that the Irishman's wife is ill in a local hospital and believing that he might attempt to see her there, the hospital town a guard was placed over her room.

COLLECTOR FOR I. W. W.

According to the police, the Irishman was the collector of dues for the I. W. W. and was employed in a machine shop where it is believed the bombs were fashioned out of pipe in spare moments. Investigation at the wrecked homes shows that the bombs had been filled with slugs.

Fourteen of the fifteen suspects arrested yesterday, in the round-up of suspects were today turned over to the federal authorities for further questioning. The other prisoner, John A. Vorst, aged 32 years, of Brooklyn, N. Y., a chemist, was committed to jail for a further investigation. He was adding chemicals in his room when arrested.

Search for the "Red" headquarters, from which the terrorist bomb outrages were sent in Philadelphia and Chicago today, according to dispatches from those cities.

The Chicago police have received information that pro-German factors are behind the terrorists activities.

The anarchist gang is headed by the dreaded "death threat" the Philadelphia dispatch said. The police say this organization is the most difficulty in breaking up these gangs, [illegible] headquarters of the terrorist band.

eastern part of the Quaker City, because of the threat of instant death which the "Red leaders dangled over the heads of all informers.

The Chicago dispatch said that the bomb outrages in various parts of the country Monday night were planned and directed from "Red headquarters" in that city.

ROUND-UP OF RADICALS.

This was intimated today by Federal agents and city detectives who last night rounded up thirty or more known radicals in several raids in the "radical settlement" on the West side of Chicago. Included in those taken into custody and being held today for the government are several men classed by Federal agents as "directing heads" of the various radical organizations throughout the country which during the past two months have been consolidated into "one big organization" with the object of "overthrowing the United States government within the next six months."

Organized crime against organized government in this country shall be stopped," says A. Mitchell Palmer, Attorney-general, at Washington, whose own residence was an object of one of the bombs.

A reorganization of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice to run down the bomb plotters has been put into effect.

William J. Flynn has been appointed chief of this Bureau of Investigation. Flynn's very name is a terror to evil doers.

MERELY CHIEF OF THE UNITED STATES

Secret Service and Police of the entire Railroad Administration.

Francis P. Garvan of New York City has been appointed assistant attorney general to direct the probe of the bomb outrages and to make special prosecution of all those arrested in these nation-wide investigations. Garvan has been chief of the Bureau of Investigation in the office of Alien property custodian, the office which Mr. Palmer held before he accepted the portfolio of attorney-general.

Attorney-General Palmer has issued a warning and a challenge to the entire "Red" element, saying:

"These outrages indicate nothing but the lawless attempt of an anarchistic element in the population to terrorize the country, and thus stay the hand of government. They have failed utterly either to terrorize or to influence the government.

"The purpose of the Department of Justice are the same today as yesterday. These attacks by bomb throwers will only increase and extend the activities of our crime-detective forces. We are determined now, as heretofore, that organized crime against organized government in this country shall be stopped."

SEEK PLOT LEADER HERE

Dispatches yesterday said that clews pointed to Pennsylvania as the

Crowd Follows Women to Hear One Abuse the Other

At the Park street subway station today the passing throng was treated to a running fire of invective hurled at a plump, attractive young girl by another woman who shouted that the "hussy" had stolen the affections of her husband—"the father of four children."

Out of the subway and down Tremont street the two women hurried, one slightly in advance of the other, while the older woman kept up an incessant tirade of threats, jeers and questions. The spectacle attracted a large crowd, who followed in the wake of the two.

As the pair neared School street the younger one stepped into a doorway and refused to "go to the Common to talk things over" with her adversary.

They started in the direction of the Common but paused in front of the burying ground to renew their encounter at counter-charges. They shook their fists at one another in each others' faces, but again declined to retreat and took their way in the direction of the Common, the outcome of the affair is not known.

But Boston and vicinity came under that suspicion today. Federal investigators were said to hold opinion that the real directing genius of the bomb plot was located right in this city and vicinity.

The town of Clinton was mentioned as a place where several persons of pronounced anarchistic views are to be found. Federal investigators in the Massachusetts State Police are keeping close track of these "Reds" especially since a theft of high explosives has been reported from there. The clews upon which the various police departments, the Postoffice Department and the Department of Justice are working are these:

In general: their knowledge of the country, and the finding of identical bits of red literature signed "Anarchist Fighters" in Washington, New York and Boston.

In Washington: A hat from De Lucca Brothers, No. 919 South Eighth street, Philadelphia, a cellar with a Philadelphia laundry mark, pieces of two wagons, almost a complete human scalp of dark hair of fine texture, fragments of a human body and of clothing.

In Pittsburgh: Fifteen anarchist suspects, arrested by Department of Justice agents and police after a pitched fight, soldiers' literature found in I. W. W. headquarters.

QUESTION HAT DEALER

In Philadelphia: One arrest; Department of Justice agents await hat of anarchist from Washington to confront seller who so far denies acquaintance with radicals. Searching for an automobile to fit description given by witnesses who saw it flee from bombed church; stolen car recovered does not fit this description.

In Cleveland: Police on trail of two men seen prowling about Mayor Davis' house with suitcase before explosion.

The appointment of William J. Flynn, reputed to be the foremost authority on anarchists and their activities in this country, as chief of the bureau of investigation of the Department of Justice was indication of a complete reorganization of this man-hunting branch of the department and the co-ordination of all other federal agencies against radicalism.

With seventy arrests already made, officials all over the country joined today to state whether any of those detained have been definitely connected with the series of bomb outrages. They made it plain, however, that the round-up would continue.

In the meantime, despite the discovery early yesterday of what appeared to be several unfused bombs, the Washington authorities today were still without success in their efforts to identify more than two of the blown to pieces by the bomb which he found to end the life of Attorney-General Palmer.

GUARD FOR OFFICIALS.

The police worked far into the night gathering shreds of clothing worn by the victim and attempting to assemble the body thrown, in spite of the fact that it had been established that he boarded a train for Washington at Philadelphia, and that it was known where he purchased the hat he wore, the police today apparently were no closer to solving his identity than they were in the hours immediately following the explosion.

JAIL BREAKER CASSIDY IN TOILS AGAIN

R. I. Society Women Worked for Freedom of Elusive Crook Rearrested in Canada

Providence, June 4 — Frank "Gimmie" Cassidy, the Providence jail breaker, who as a repentant and reformed "crook" worked upon the sympathies of the society women of Rhode Island until they petitioned for his discharge, is in the toils again. He has been arrested in Burlington, Ont., charged with holding up a bank cashier.

The elusive Cassidy since his last feat in walking out of the State Prison in Cranston has been reported in a half dozen places where there was ready work. When Pennsylvania auto bandits were rounded up "Smooth" lived up to his name, and escaped the net. Gangsters in a half dozen States acknowledge the erstwhile out of the dance of Newport as their master, and no really high class piece of crime in recent months has been without Cassidy's reported mentioned Cassidy as probably among those present.

Finally Cassidy became weary waiting for the pardon his society friends were securing for him, and fled to Canada a month before he would have been released, as he had previously broken jail at North Providence and Worcester, N. Y. He is about thirty-five years old.

Providence authorities will send a man to Canada to put in a claim to the much-wanted Cassidy after Dominion justice has been satisfied.

Dr. Samuel Crowell of Dorchester gave an address on "The reflections of a physician who stayed at home." At the afternoon session the speakers included Rear Admiral Beth Commissioner Eugene R. Kelley, C. H. W. Foster, trustee of the Massachusetts General Hospital; Dr. F. H. Nichols of Boston; Major H. L. Coles, recent head of the U. S. A. Hospital at Parker Hill, and Dr. H. P. Stevens of Cambridge.

LINK DYNAMITE THEFT AT BOLTON WITH BOMBS

Clinton, June 4—The storehouse of the Kunsawa Brook Golf Club at Bolton has been broken into and about two-thirds of a box of dynamite, which was being used to blow up a pond where they were getting ice, stolen. The police declare that if this stolen explosive was used in the bomb outrages which yesterday were exploded in Newton and Roxbury, there was ample time between the theft and the explosion to utilize it.

Music Hath Charms to Soothe the Harvard Senior

Music is spurring on the Harvard seniors to stronger effort in tackling the well known bugaboo, the final examinations. The faltering student is fast becoming self confident, and a little mixture and psychology has brought this about.

Daily organ recitals are being given in the college chapel from 5 to 5:10 in the afternoon. They are designed to soothe the student's nerves directly distraught with important examinations immediately before him. He comes out of these recitals inspired, as it were, and makes his big effort in class and gets passable marks as a result.

Dr. A. T. Davison, professor of music at Harvard, is the pioneer in the field in introducing the practice in men's colleges. Many specials of a musical nature, he proses, however, first started at Wellesley College, and so successful will be prove, that Dr. Davison had no hesitation in introducing them at Harvard.

SAWDUST TEA AT RUTLAND, SAY PATIENTS

Man Who Complained Denounced as "Mutt," He Testifies at Hearing

Rutland, June 4.—Ancient eggs, termingled with sawdust, and bread inhabited by roaches, were some of the articles of food given to patients at the State Tuberculosis Sanatorium, according to testimony at the conclusion of the hearing today.

One of the witnesses testified that when he complained to Superintendnt Ernest B. Emerson he was called a "big mutt." It was also stated that the superintendent declared he had no sympathy with men of the type of those complaining.

One of the witnesses called before the legislative committee was William L. Bishop, a grocer. He testified that to the best of his knowledge sawdust was mixed with the tea served in the mess.

Michael Flaherty said the bread contained roaches and bits of wood. O'Brien, another witness, said the tea said was served at today's breakfast. This exhibit was examined carefully by the hearing room and its age was at length determined as being about five months.

Flaherty, who was the man said to have been characterized as a "big mutt," testified further that Simon Swig and other Bostonians had contributed $100 each toward an entertainment for the patients, but that this entertainment never took place.

This first official bit of information of the incidents attending Barney's sensational capture by the police came out at the Brighton Police Court hearing today given Mrs. Lillian M. Ashenden of No. 1413 Commonwealth avenue. Mrs. Marion O'Brien, Barney's sweetheart; Mrs. Mary E. Collins and Thomas F. Murphy, Barney's lawyer, charged with being accessories to Barney's escape.

CROWLEY ON STAND.

Sheriff John H. Kelliher, Deputy Sheriffs Casey and Doherty and Police Superintendent Michael H. Crowley were the first four witnesses. The two deputy sheriffs testified formally that Barney had been incarcerated, and that information of Barney's escape, recapture and reimprisonment had been duly reported to them.

Police Superintendent Crowley testified to having gone to the apartment of Mrs. Lillian M. Ashenden on the night of Barney's recapture. Mr. Crowley testified that he informed Mrs. Ashenden that Barney had told him that he (Barney) had been in her apartment.

On objection by Attorney Jugginis, counsel for defendant, Murphy, this testimony was excluded, but witness was permitted to say that Barney had told him that he had been in an apartment on Commonwealth avenue with a woman named Lillian. Superintendent Crowley testified that Mrs. Ashenden denied that Barney or any one had been in her apartment, and said that she had no men visitors at her apartment.

OFFERED TO GO TO JAIL.

Testifying further, the police superintendent said that when he told Mrs. Ashenden that a tall and dark, complexioned woman had been with Barney he knew that he was not telling her the truth. Mrs. Ashenden, he went on, denied that any man had been in her apartment except Barney, a grocery man. He said that Mrs. Ashenden offered to go to jail for a few days if Barney could have a chance to pick her out as the woman he had been with, but he did not take her to the jail.

Mr. Crowley testified that Mrs. Collins, another of the defendants was in Mrs. Ashenden's apartment during his conversation with Mrs. Ashenden and that Mrs. Collins was dressed for the street and had with her a dog on a leash.

FOUND CROWD IN STREET.

Mrs. Ashenden, the superintendent said, told him she had been out and that she left her apartment at 7 p. m. on the night in question and returned some time after 9 to find a crowd in the street in front of her house. Mr. Crowley quoted Mrs. Ashenden as saying that she supposed a burglar had broken into the house and that that was the reason for the presence of the crowd.

Cross-examined by Attorney Jugginis, the police superintendent said that he had not warned Mrs. Ashenden of her legal rights inasmuch as anything she told him might be used against her.

Sheriff Kelliher was next called to the stand. He opened his testimony with regard to a letter he had received from Attorney Murphy, one of the defendants, on the morning following Barney's escape. Murphy in his letter said that he had been to the Charles Street jail to see a client named Rizzio who is awaiting trial for murder, and that he had seen Barney.

He said Attorney Murphy in his letter asked him if he could not give Rizzio some work to do during his confinement and added that he had noticed that Barney was looking better than ever before and was better mentally as a result of the work he was doing. The sheriff testified that Attorney Murphy thanked him for his treatment of Barney.

DEAR FOLKS:

BUSINESS took me to Scranton, Pa., during the week of May 12-17, and while there I was fortunate in meeting forty-seven men who represent the IRON DIVISION of Wilson and Company—managers of branches and salesmen. It was during this week that the people of the Keystone State bubbled over with enthusiasm and a wonderful welcome to the men of the IRON DIVISION OF PENNSYLVANIA who had returned from France, after having performed in magnificent fashion at a great sacrifice of life, but showing that indomitable courage and will power which are attributes of the men of rugged character and physique that the hills of Northern Pennsylvania raise.

I wouldn't have missed this unexpected meeting of these forty-seven men for anything. Their very knowledge of the Wilson and Company organization has been confined largely to personal contact with the rank and file of workers in the Chicago and New York plants. It had been a very pleasant surprise to these representatives in a convention of their own. This convention of the managers of branches and salesmen of Wilson and Company in the Northeastern District of Pennsylvania had been in place to discuss ways and means to better promote the sale of the Wilson Certified food products, such as Certified Bolled Hams, Bolled hams, sausage and canned fruits, vegetables and meats.

It was my privilege to sit in their meeting, and I am very glad I had the opportunity to do so. These men have got it in their souls to promote the interests of their chief, Thomas E. Wilson, who has put intelligence and integrity into food products, something that has given his name and his products a reputation which permits his sales organizations in all sections of the country to sell Wilson Certified Brands under their good name and quality without necessitating salesmen to carry samples.

I heard a new phrase used by one of the branch managers that I think is a "corker," and I am passing it along to you because you will appreciate what it means to be compelled to be backed up by men who are so proud of its achievements in food productions that they owned the business themselves.

This is what he said:

"Isn't it great, boys, to be associated with an organization in which our CONFIDENCE IS CERTIFIED to as great an extent as the Certified products which we have the pleasure of selling? You can't beat that, boys, can you?"

Did you ever hear before the expression "Certified Confidence"? Do you appreciate what it means? How many friends have you on your list in whom you have "certified confidence"?

Answering that question for yourselves, you know what it means then when I tell you that this Northeastern Division of Pennsylvania branch workers and salesmen, as well as the other divisions of salesmen in all sections of the country, HAVE "Certified Confidence" in Thomas E. Wilson and his food products.

The Chairman of the meeting made these remarks:

"With the splendid backing that our sales people are getting from Mr. Wilson and the family of executives and his associate workers in the various plants, we must pull together to the end that Wilson products may be found on sale on the shelves of every food merchant in our territory. Wilson products must be liberally distributed among dealers so that the consumer will have no difficulty in finding what he must develop and cultivate the trade of the small dealer. We must not overlook the fact that the small dealer is the large dealer of next year. Banded together as we are, no power on earth can hold us back from making a place for our Company and ourselves in the business world. We know that the policy of the business is sound to the core, and the fact that Mr. Wilson has given the square deal for all, there is no reason why dealers everywhere should not carry a full line of Wilson and Company products, thus enabling us to establish a wonderful chain of dealer-handling Certified foods from one end of the country to the other, and, through these dealers establishing a splendid relationship between the consumers and our organization. We have confidence in our Company and in its methods—we have confidence in ourselves, and with these three fundamentals we cannot fail to build a business that will endure in honor and service forever."

The general consensus of opinion among the forty-seven salesmen in the IRON DIVISION of Wilson and Company in Northeastern Pennsylvania was that they wished to be on the Wilson and Company payroll, and that it gives them an opportunity to satisfy their ambition in life. They say that they like to be identified with an organization which stands for Integrity and CERTIFIED PRACTICE in business.

One man, in speaking of Wilson and Company's Certified Bolled Hams, said:

"Boys, if we have any difficulty in persuading any dealer to buy Wilson and Company's Certified Bolled Hams, from us, it is our own fault. Now, do you know that we made a recent test of how this ham cuts up, and we discovered that there was only one ounce of waste in the whole ham. We not only certify as to quality, but we certify to economy in use."

The pride that Wilson and Company workers feel in their organization hasn't a chance on earth of ever having a fall, because it is too genuine and too deep rooted, and so entirely justified.

Sincerely yours, William C. Freeman,
256 Fifth Ave., New York City.

200 HOLYOKE SCHOOL PUPILS STRIKE WHEN PRINCIPAL IS OUSTED

REMOVAL LEADS TO PROTEST

Principal Callahan Disputes With School Board Chairman During Demonstration

Holyoke, June 4.—Two hundred pupils in the Highlands Grammar School struck today, staged a hostile demonstration outside the building and then separated according to sex, the girls to attend a party, the boys to go swimming. They demand the reinstatement of Principal John J. Callahan.

After considerable remonstrance by the members of the school board, some of the strikers returned, but with the threat that if Mr. Callahan is not reinstated by Monday, there will be another and general walkout. There are 550 boys and girls attending the school.

The troubles which have been brewing in the administration of the Highlands School culminated when what was close to a personal encounter occurred between Principal Callahan and Francis McSherry, president of the school board.

McSHERRY FOLLOWS PARADE.

Mr. McSherry followed the parade of 200 boys and girls from the school building to Mr. Callahan's home, where he found them making protestations of undying allegiance to the suspended principal, and composing a slogan of "No Callahan, no school."

Mr. McSherry appealed to Mr. Callahan to advise his youthful admirers to return to their classrooms. Mr. Callahan left his veranda and expressed himself in simple and unvarnished language toward his superior, declaring that he himself was the victim of politics, and had been suspended because he protested the transfer of a teacher of merit from his building.

THORPE INTERVENES

School Committeeman Henry F. Thorpe later arrived and prevailed upon Principal Callahan to advise a return to school.

The wealth of comic relief was added to by one girl who, exercising the prerogative of her sex regarding the changing of her mind, changed it twice. She first repented her decision to join the strikers and went back to her classroom. Then she repented this step and, her way being barred, she jumped out a window on the ground floor and put off to the "party" in progress at the home of one of the schoolgirl strikers.

BREAKS NECK WHILE TRYING TO ESCAPE HEAT

Lawrence, June 4. — Charles Van Beaver, thirty-five, was the first victim of the heat wave here, dying at his home, No. 8 Caulkins court, today from a broken neck received in diving in the Merrimack River, where he sought to escape the heat. Van Beaver would have drowned after the accident had not his wife jumped into the river and brought him to shore after a desperate struggle. The effort was useless as far as saving Van Beaver's life was concerned, however, as he died while the police were preparing to remove him to the hospital.

MRS. RICHARDSON TO PAY $7 A WEEKLY FOR MOTHER

Mrs. Sarah D. Richardson must pay $7 a week toward the support of her aged mother, by order of Judge Bacon today in the Newton Court. The mother is Mrs. Sara de Voll, a former physician, now eighty years old. Mrs. Richardson was in court on complaint of her sister, Mrs. Ida French, wife of Dr. Charles French of Watertown. According to testimony, the Frenches have been supporting Mrs. de Voll twenty years. She is now an invalid in an institution. Mrs. Richardson is the widow of George Richardson, a Cambridge banker.

FISHERMEN NOW TAKING GENERAL STRIKE VOTE

Boston is now threatened with a fishermen's strike. A nation-wide strike vote is being taken today in locals of all the cities of the country. The fishermen demand a minimum price for fish, better marketing arrangements as well as a reclassification of the fish. On March 15 the War Labor Board considered their demands together with those of the Engineers, Pilots and others. But the leaders of the fishermen local in Boston say that the board made concessions to all except the fishermen.

SOUTH BOSTON MAN HURT BADLY IN LAWRENCE

Lawrence, June 4.—Elias N. Steeves of No. 285 Fourth street, South Boston, was crushed between a motor tractor and an auto truck when they collided today near the grounds of the Merrimack Valley Country Club. He was hurried to the Lawrence General Hospital, where surgeons performed an operation in the effort to save his life. His condition is serious.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

YES, IT'S HOT IN BOSTON, BUT THE YOUNGSTERS FOUND A WAY TO KEEP COOL

"Joe" Rucci, of the North End, doesn't mind the heat when his little sister squeezes the sponge which sprinkles him with cooling water. Sister Isabel appears to enjoy the treat fully as much as baby "Joe."

The "heat wave" holds no horrors for this group of happy, barefoot youngsters, caught by the camera while engaged in a "splash" in the Frog Pond on the Common. Crowds of envious adults watched the antics of children in the Frog Pond throughout the day.

greatly alleviated, however, by an east wind, which, springing up shortly before noon, drove the mercury down to a point lower than that of yesterday.

The State Bathhouse at Revere Beach was thrown open at noon, and through the efforts of the American, similar action was taken with all the municipal baths. A number of schoolhouses in the suburbs were closed as a result of the heat.

Today was hotter by several degrees early in the morning than yesterday, and at 10 o'clock had reached 87. The hottest June 4 previously was in 1912, when the mercury went to 86. At 8 o'clock today Key West and Boston showed the same temperatures of 81.

At Dedham the mercury had reached 100 at 10 o'clock, while Cleary square, Hyde Park, reported 97 at the same hour, and South Boston 94.

Under orders from Mayor Peters, the fire department had flushed the streets of the North, West and South Ends, which helped to alleviate the suffering in these districts. The Common was also thrown open and hundreds availed themselves of the opportunity to sleep on the grass under the open sky.

Women and children were permitted to ride on the city ferryboats without charge, while benches were placed on the bridges.

Early today the prostration was reported of Mary Collins, fifty-eight, of No. 167 West Canton street, South End, who collapsed in the North Station waiting room. She was taken to the Relief Hospital where her condition was reported as serious. Thomas Flynn, forty-nine, of No. 3 Corning street, South End, was taken from the John Hancock Building on Devonshire street to the Relief Hospital. His condition was said to be fairly good.

Sergeant Joseph A. Tracy of the Marines, stationed at the navy yard, was stricken in front of No. 40 North street and removed to the Haymarket Relief Station.

BOY 'CATCHES' THIEVES IN ACT OF TAKING AUTO

Lad Gives Tip to Policeman, Who Recovers Car as Four Men Flee

Through the alertness of an office boy, the Boston police have got a "line" on the automobile thieves who have been working in Boston for the past few weeks. The City Hall avenue police nearly landed two of the gang through aid given by this office boy. The boy, employed in a Congress square office, was gazing out the window when he saw four men hovering near the parking space in the square.

He observed two of the men get into a car and try to back it out of the parking space. It was jammed and they did not succeed. They left it, walked along the street and the boy saw them get into another car at the curbing within two or three minutes after the owner had left it to go into a building. Convinced that the men were auto thieves, the boy ran to Congress and State streets, in which direction the car had gone, and notified the crossing policeman. The boy and officer followed after the machine and found it blocked in the traffic at Washington and State streets.

Anticipating pursuit, the thieves were on the alert and when they saw the ringing policeman, jumped from the car and left it standing in the middle of the street. They escaped.

The office boy was praised by the police for his timely action. They have a good description of the thieves and expect to arrest them.

Captain James F. Sullivan of City Hall avenue station said today that there are at least six men in the Boston gang, that they are young men of good appearance and well dressed.

BAY STATE RAILWAY MEN REFUSE DEMAND

Officials of the Bay State Street Railway Company at a conference with James H. Vahey, representing the employes, today in the Federal Building refused to agree to seven days' pay for six days' work. Guy W. Currier, counsel for the company, read the labor clause of the Peace Treaty in an effort to show that the government is opposed to the seven-day week. Jettě Lauck, secretary of the War Labor Board, acted as moderator. The company agreed to adopt the seniority system in hiring pitmen and mechanics.

FORMER PHYSICIAN AT JAMAICA PLAIN DIES

H. where he was the proprietor of the Mountain Rest. Dr. Lennon is survived by his wife, his mother, three sisters and a brother. The body was taken to Boston this afternoon. Interment was in the Old Calvary Cemetery.

CAMP DEVENS MELTS AT 112 DEGREES IN SUN

Camp Devens, June 4.—A reputable thermometer, regarded as unusually truthful by the army officials, registered 112 in the sun. Another not far distant, perched in the shade, scored 98.2.

400 Stalled All Night at Nantasket When Power Fails

While thousands of city dwellers sweltered from the heat, 400 men, women and children, stalled at Nantasket nearly all night because of a breakdown on the New Haven electric power system-built a huge bonfire to keep the mosquitoes away.

When the Nantasket Beach Steamboat Company learned of the predicament of the people the steamer Old Colony made two trips to and from Boston, carrying over 2,000 persons. The last of the crowd arrived at Rowe's wharf, Boston, at 8 a.m.

An official of the steamboat company told a Boston American reporter that if proper arrangements had been made by the railroad officials the steamer would have been sent to Nantasket Beach, thereby preventing hundreds from walking.

The distance from the beach to where the steamer was is five miles. Scores of people, including many young women with high-heeled shoes, walked the whole five miles along the railroad track and were in a sorry plight when they arrived at the steamship wharf.

As soon as they got aboard the boat they flopped into camp chairs and fell asleep. It was with difficulty that their escorts arofused them when the Old Colony arrived at Atlantic avenue.

According to officials of Nantasket Steamboat Company the mixup was due to a misunderstanding of the men in the New Haven Railroad power house, which supplies electricity for the railway line between Nantasket and Pemberton. Traffic was unusually heavy last evening because of the heat, and hundreds of persons remained at the beach for the last electric train, which leaves at 10:47 to connect with the last boat from Pemberton at 11:10.

The last train had but four cars to accommodate the hundreds of persons desirous of riding. These cars quickly filled and the train proceeded to Pemberton. It then ran back to Nantasket Junction and added four cars, afterward going back to the beach.

When the power house employes saw the train return from Pemberton they believed their night's work at an end, shut off the power and banked the fires and went to bed. Later an official of the steamboat company routed a railroad employe out of bed and in turn aroused the power house employes.

The power was turned on, but was so low, due to the banked fires, that it was insufficient to move the eight-car train the whole distance. The train was then broken in two and the first section proceeded to Pemberton, where the passengers boarded the Old Colony and returned to Boston.

The boat went back to Pemberton, and by that time the rest of the crowd had arrived, either "hoofing it" over the railroad ties or riding when sufficient power was obtained.

Officials of the Nantasket Steamboat Company wish it understood that the company was in no way to blame for the situation which arose last night, owing to the failure of the power of the New Haven Railroad electric trains. The steamboat company kept its boats in service many hours after the last scheduled trip in an effort to get everybody home, and while making no reflection upon the railroad company, the Nantasket Line thinks it is entitled to credit for standing by until three o'clock in the morning.

PASSED FALSE COINS, FEARING BODILY HARM

Rocco Rizosaro of Gardner, arrested yesterday charged with passing counterfeit silver dollars, appeared for trial in the Federal Court today and pleaded guilty. Sentence was deferred on request of Assistant U. S. District Attorney Rhea. The trial was before Judge Aldrich and a jury.

Rizosaro, who admitted passing sixteen silver dollars in Worcester, said he did so under fear of bodily harm, and not of his own free choice. He stated that a man whom he had met once in Worcester gave him the coins.

Rizosaro was one of six persons arrested so far in the case, the others being four men and one woman, the wife of one of the defendants.

These are under indictment also. They were all taken three weeks ago, after investigation by secret service agents, who found unfinished coins and a plant for their manufacture in a house in Worcester. The other defendants are Maria and Rocco Iacousi, husband and wife and Alfredo Martello, all of Worcester; and Michele di Bettoli and Dominico Spanodi of Providence.

ASKS PARDON FOR SLAYER OF WOMAN

A pardon plea for Ray C. Johnson, now serving a life sentence in Charlestown State Prison for the murder of a woman who incited his jealousy after he had befriended her, was made to the Governor's Council today by Senator John J. Walsh of Boston.

A sister of the murdered woman appeared before the council and said that the relations between Johnson and her sister "were wholly the fault of my sister."

Johnson shot and killed Sarah A. Peters in a Washington street lodging house in 1905. About two years before the shooting Mrs. Peters had been deserted by her husband.

Johnson, described by Senator Walsh, as "a country boy who fell victim to her," supported her and her two children. They lived together as "Mr. and Mrs. Johnson." Walsh said that Johnson finally became jealous of her attentions to other men, and the shooting followed.

The council deferred action for a week in order that further investigation may be made.

BRITISH EXPEL U. S. OFFICERS IN IRELAND

Action Result of Alleged Partisanship With Sinn Fein Organization

London, June 4.—An American major and a lieutenant from the Quartermaster's Department of the American Expeditionary forces, who were spending their leave in Ireland, were expelled Sunday by order of the British government as a result, it is alleged, of indiscreet partisanship with the Sinn Fein.

The summary expulsion of the two officers has created a sensation at General Biddle's headquarters in London, where both have reported.

Though General Biddle's staff denies all knowledge of the event, even the adjutant asserting to the correspondent that he never heard of it, the fact remains that the major and the lieutenant were summoned to the judge advocate's office today for a long conference.

From authoritative quarters where the two officers reported their trips it was immediately upon their arrival in London, Universal Service learns that the cause of their expulsion.

The two officers have been for several days in Ireland, often in the company of prominent Sinn Feiners. On Saturday night they attended a Sinn Fein function at the Dublin Mansion House, were introduced to Valera was making a speech dealing with the hopes Ireland still pinned on the American delegates at Paris as well as on the American Congress at Washington.

The officers are alleged to have made remarks favoring pro-Sinn Fein remarks. They were overheard by British secret service agents, who reported them to the British government.

Thomas W. Lawson announces the engagement of his youngest daughter, Miss Mary Lawson, to Captain Jerome Allison Edwards.

No date for the wedding will be in the near future, and it will be announced soon as Captain Edwards' business affairs, which are probably call him to a foreign country, are definitely settled.

Captain Edwards has just returned from France with B Battery, 302nd Field Artillery, which organization he commanded from its formation in September, 1917, until mustered out of the service last month.

THIN PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE PHOSPHATE

Nothing Like Plain Nitro-Phosphate to Put on Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigor and Nerve Force.

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, developing arms, neck and bust, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are often due to starved nerves, and the sudden need most physicians have is contained in modern feeding. Where you find there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known locally as Nitro-Phosphate, which is inexpensive and in sold in most druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back. By feeding directly to and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, nitro-phosphate should produce a welcome transformation in one's appearance; the increase in weight frequently being surprising.

Increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which always accompany excessive thinness, should soon disappear, dull eyes ought to brighten and pale cheeks follow with the return of perfect health.

CAUTION: Although nitro-phosphate is unsurpassed for relieving nervousness, sleeplessness and general weakness, it should not, owing to its tendency to increase weight, be used by anyone who does not desire to put on flesh.

Next take two five grain tablets of NUXATED IRON three times per day for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. HALT IN NAVAL PROGRAM BY BRITAIN

Announcement Expected Soon That Empire Will Follow Example of U. S.

By International News Service.

Paris, June 4.—American peace delegates understand that Great Britain shortly will make an announcement of a postponement of her naval building program similar to that made on behalf of the United States by Secretary Daniels.

It is denied that any definite agreement has been entered into by the American and British peace delegates. But it appears that there is a general understanding between the Americans and British, who were the warmest advocates of the league of nations, that they must prove their faith in the league by definite acts.

Secretary Daniels' announcement, the league supporters declare, is the first fruit of the league formation. They expect practical results to follow in the way of announcements from Great Britain, France, and other allied nations.

The American delegates are watching with the greatest interest the fragmentary reports on the league debate in the United States Senate. They do not believe the opponents of the league will succeed in their effort to separate the covenant from the text of the peace treaty.

Wilson, Trying to Avert New Treaty Crisis, Urges Speeding Up Conference

By Universal Service.

Paris, June 4.—In a dual sense the final crisis in the peace deliberations is at hand. For a multitude of reasons time is pressing as never before and the work must be wound up or collapse within a short period. This applies both to the treaty with Germany and that with Austria.

The American and British delegations demand radical changes in the original treaty. The French vigorously oppose any and all modifications, but as matters now stand they will unquestionably have to yield to some.

The German counter-proposals must be answered and the powers must act together in a final agreement on the still unfinished clauses with the Republic of Austria.

President Wilson is energetically driving for a speedy conclusion of the conference labors. Presiding at a conference with his colleagues on the American commission and a corps of experts he is reported to have said:

"Time is the most essential now. We must get the world back to work. It is necessary for America to mediate the most trifling problems, agreement with Britain and France and then insist upon acceptance by Germany.

Probably the most important session of the whole conference took place when strenuous efforts were made by the "Big Four" to find a common basis upon which an answer to the German counter proposals may be drafted.

Ultimatum Saturday by Allies to Germans on Counter Proposals

By International News Service.

Berlin, June 4.—A report reached here today from Versailles that the German delegates expect an ultimatum from the allies on Saturday, rejecting the German counter proposals to the terms of peace.

If this report is true, Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau and the other German delegates will return to Berlin, leaving the final decision to the government, it is stated here. It is felt here that the government will not sign the treaty if the German demands are flatly rejected.

Paris dispatches to the International News Service report the American and British delegates, supported by the Italians, pressing for concessions to the Germans and modification of the treaty.

Arrest of Dr. Dortens Has Been Ordered by the Ebert Government

Berlin, June 4.—The Ebert government, according to the semi-official Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, has ordered the arrest of Dr. Dortens, provisional president of the republic of the Rhineland, established two days ago.

At the same time the paper announces Ebert has sent protests both to the allied armistice commission at Spa and through Count Brockdorff-Rantzau to the peace conference at Paris against what is described as misconduct on the part of the French army of occupation.

The charge is made that the French have been fomenting separatist strife in Germany and are chiefly responsible for the Rhineland's break-away from Prussia.

Believe Irish Dispute Will Be Settled by League of Nations

By WILLIAM J. BUTLER,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

Paris, June 4.—The Irish question, in all probability, will be left for settlement by the League of Nations, a high American diplomat informed the correspondent in discussing the latest letter from Frank P. Walsh and ex-Governor Dunne of Illinois, the two Irish-American commissioners to President Wilson.

President Wilson has not yet answered the letter, but it is thought the clause in the Austrian treaty by which the political and religious minorities in the new States of Central Europe come under the protection of the league will be interpreted as being sufficiently elastic to stretch it to Ireland's case.

Mr. Walsh, chairman of the Irish-American Commission, declines to comment on this probability, but there is a strong report, he has been given to understand, that such will be the most likely solution of the Irish tangle.

Mrs. Hearst Honored for Work in War

New York, June 4.—A few days ago members of the Mayor's Committee of Women on National Defence received invitations to tea yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Lewis Nixon, No. 22 East Fifty-third street.

Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, chairman of the committee, was especially "warned" that she must be present. When she arrived, Mrs. Hearst was surprised to find that practically every member of her committee had preceded her.

When she was ushered into the drawing room there came the first of a series of surprises. For the beautiful apartment was decorated in the city's colors of blue and gold, an effect obtained by a wondrous blending of cosmos and snap dragon.

GIVEN LOVING CUP.

While Mrs. Hearst, a bit puzzled, gazed into the smiling faces of the company, Miss Elizabeth Marbury, chairman of the publicity committee, rose and presented the chairman of the committee with a beautiful silver loving cup in recognition of her splendid work for soldiers, sailors and marines during the war. Almost half a million men of the service were entertained at canteens or in other multiple activities of the Mayor's Committee of Women during the war.

Miss Marbury said:

"It is not in any perfunctory spirit that we have gathered this afternoon to make this presentation of a token of esteem to our efficient chairman. It is because we feel a personal debt to Mrs. Hearst. It is more than admiration that we have for her kind her never failing zeal, efficiency and intelligent efforts as chairman of our committee.

CO-WORKERS LOVE HER.

"I know that I speak for every member of the committee when I say this. The best tribute I can pay Mrs. Hearst is to say she was always on the job. Winter and Summer. We, her co-workers, have grown to love her personally as well as to admire her wonderful work.

"I am accustomed to speak on the platform, and most public speeches are labor. But this is the easiest speech I ever made, because it comes from my heart. We women have worked with harmony always, and in such an atmosphere it is easy to say these few words of appreciation.

"It is the fashion now to criticise all official agencies. But I cannot help adding to my tribute to Mrs. Hearst a tribute to the officials of this city. To the Mayor down, we women of the Mayor's Committee have found them always helpful and willing to co-operate with us in every measure for good we sought.

"We have gotten out a report showing what the committee has accomplished. It is a wonderful record. I advise everyone here who has not to read it. This report and the things it reveals were made possible because of the leadership of Mrs. Hearst."

MRS. HEARST REPLIES.

Miss Marbury then drew off the cloth cover of the massive loving cup and presented it to Mrs. Hearst. Greatly touched, Mrs. Hearst made this reply:

"I am greatly pleased and greatly honored to receive this beautiful cup and the good wishes which accompany it. I shall always prize it, and it will always typify to me the generous spirit of harmony and co-operation with which this committee has labored in our good cause.

"The many things which we have accomplished in the service of our city and for the soldiers could not have been accomplished so successfully without this fine spirit.

"I wish to thank you all, therefore, most sincerely for this expression of your good-will, but still more for the splendid support you have given me throughout the whole period of our war work."

TRIBUTE ETCHED ON CUP.

The presentation inscription on the cup reads as follows:

"To Millicent Hearst, Chairman of the Mayor's Committee of Women on National Defense, from her co-workers in appreciation and recognition of her patriotic work and splendid service during the World's War. 1914-1919."

On the base of the cup is a chased etching representation of the first open air canteen in America, above it being the inscription:

"Fac simile of first open air canteen in America, Fifth avenue and Fortieth street, erected by the chairman of the Mayor's Committee. Here and at three others 450,000 fighting men were served and otherwise enjoyed New York City's hospitality."

After the presentation, the guests adjourned to an adjoining room, where tea was served. On the table in this room was a miniature of a Mayor's Committee canteen, lighted from within with electrics.

GUESTS AT EVENT.

Those present included Mrs. John F. Hylan, Miss Virginia Hylan, Mrs. Oliver Harriman, Mrs. Ned Arden Flood, Mrs. Henry Alexander, Mrs. Nelson Henry, Miss Georgiana Roberts, Miss Amy Hilliard, Miss Alice Carpenter, Mrs. Edward Breitung, Mrs. Elizabeth R. Mr. White is president of the Bridgewater Trust company, as well as treasurer of the White Shoe Company.

CRIPPLE SAVES YOUTH DROWNING IN CHARLES

David Kandler, eighteen, of No. 8 Woodcliff street, Roxbury, was stricken with cramps while swimming in the Charles river near the Harvard Bridge and sank. Manuel Henders, of No. 13 Franklin street, Somerville, and Harvey Singer, No. 35 Anderson street, West End, went to his assistance.

Henders, although compelled to use crutches in walking, proved strong enough to hold Kandler above the water until a boat came to their assistance.

SENATE SMARTS UNDER DELAY OF TREATY

By International News Service.

Washington, June 4.—The text of the peace treaty as submitted to Germany will certainly be read in the Senate and into the Congressional Record within the next forty-eight hours, if the State Department persists in its refusal to furnish the Senate with a copy of it.

This prediction was made today by Senator Borah, Progressive Republican of Idaho, who also declared that he possessed indisputable evidence that authentic copies of the peace treaty were in the possession of big business and financial interests in New York City, which he defied the State Department to disprove.

SOLIDIFIES FOES OF LEAGUE.

"I saw the peace treaty in New York City. I had it in my hands; I had ample opportunity to examine it; I know exactly what it contains; I know exactly how many printed pages it is composed of, how many words approximately it is composed of," was the equally emphatic declaration of Senator Lodge, Republican, of Massachusetts, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and leader of the Senate majority.

The alleged discovery that copies of the peace treaty had reached powerful interests in New York City, while the Senate was still denied an opportunity to peruse it, coupled with the statement of Acting Secretary of State Polk that probably certain financial agreements incorporated in the peace treaty had reached certain New York financial men through their Paris representatives, has served to solidify the opposition in the Senate to the proposed League of Nations, it was stated by both Republican and Democratic senators who are avowed antileaguers.

"If New York financial interests were granted the privilege of examining certain financial agreements, surely the Senate is entitled to examine whatever governmental agreements the peace treaty may contain," Senator Borah said.

DEMAND COPY OF TREATY

"I am sure that another forty-eight hours will not elapse before the Senate will be able to present the peace treaty to the American people, who certainly have as much right to know exactly what it contains as the German people.

"I feel confident that the efforts of the administration to suppress the peace treaty in the United States, while it is being hawked about the streets of Berlin for every German to purchase for a pittance, will not prove successful much longer."

ASKS DEDHAM POLICE TO FIND MISSING SON

John T. DeForrest of No. 28 Franklin street, Dedham, today requested chief of police James J. Shine of that town to try and locate his son, James T. DeForrest, who has been missing a week. The father said he believed that the boy followed the circus, but at Springfield could find no trace of him. James is fifteen years old and wore a dark gray suit and gray cap.

More Milk

Of course you know that milk is good for you. But do you use as much of it as you should?

Every adult should consume at least a pint daily; children a quart.

Milk is food. If you were to pay twice as much for it as you do, it would still be the cheapest as well as the best of all foods.

To get the nourishment contained in a single quart of milk, Professor Roseneau of Harvard says you would have to buy two pounds of chicken or eight eggs or 3-4 of a pound of beef. Less of these will be necessary if more milk is used.

Compare costs: Milk wins.

OPS CALLED STRIKE AT TOLEDO

ree Dead, Many Hurt in Riots at Big Auto Plant

Toledo, O., June 4.—With a resumption of the rioting which last night cost three lives and resulted in the serious injury of eleven feared hourly, authorities were today awaiting action by Governor Cox on the appeal of Mayor Cornell Schreiber that troops be sent here to preserve order.

The Willys Overland plants, where 20,000 men have been on strike for nearly a month, closed today following the rioting of last night. Vice-President Earl said that the plants would not reopen until the present trouble dies down.

Governor Cox left Dayton for Columbus early today. "I have been in touch with the mayor of Toledo regarding the situation," the Governor said before leaving. "That is all I have to say at present."

It was reported after the Governor left that he might appeal to Washington. It was pointed out that Ohio has no National Guard, and therefore the Governor has no troops to send to Toledo in response to Mayor Schreiber's appeal. It was also pointed out that some federal action would be necessary to permit the sending of troops from Camp Sherman or Camp Custer.

Mayor Schreiber spent the night at his office in the City Hall and at the Hotel Secor.

MAYOR'S HOME GUARDED.

A report was thrown about his home after a house next door had been stoned and its windows broken. It is believed that the place was mistaken for the Mayor's home.

Union labor leaders today emphatically denied responsibility for the rioting which began as men who remained loyal to their employers were leaving the Willys Overland plant. A great crowd estimated at 5,000, including many women, gathered in front of the plant.

As the workmen came out they were attacked. Deputy sheriffs and discharged soldiers in uniform who had been retained by Mayor Schreiber as guards attempted to disperse the crowd. A free-for-all fight ensued, in which brickbats, clubs and guns were used. Reinforcements arrived and the crowd was finally dispersed after two men had been shot and eight others seriously injured by flying missiles.

MURDER DEFENDANT WINS TWO MOTIONS

Hartford, Ct., June 4.—Two points were won by the accused in the first degree murder case against Mrs. Amy E. Archer-Millican, arrested three years ago following the sudden deaths of a score of her life-paid inmates of the Archer Home for Elderly People.

Judge Keeler agreed that because of the unusual publicity it might be impossible to get an impartial and unprejudiced jury in Hartford County, and ordered the case tried in Middlesex County, opening in Middletown June 12. He also granted a motion for additional counsel.

McCORMICK'S ALIBI IN DEATH CASE REFUSED

Concord, N. H., June 4.—An alibi for John McCormick, held here on the charge of complicity in the murder of Dennis Clifford, in Hooksett, October 12, 1918, has been offered. Evidence was presented to county officials to show that McCormick was in Maine on the day of the murder. Admitting that such evidence had been offered, officials would not at once accept it. It had been alleged that McCormick last week made a confession that he was an eye-witness of the killing of Clifford.

STARTLING NEW FASHIONS DAZE PARISIANS

In Addition to Bare Legs, Women Are Wearing Tight Gowns Cut Short at Bottom

By International News Service.

Paris, May 22 (By Mail).—Startling news fashions in women's apparel have made their appearance at the Longchamps race course, where the Parisian smart set annually set the styles.

In addition to bare legs the women are wearing extremely tight gowns, cut very short at the bottom and very low at the top. The arms are exposed unless covered by a cape.

Dressmakers declare that the women's dresses are to be shorter than ever this season and are to be cut down further in the front and back.

Nothing is worn underneath the newest gowns but girdles and lingerie.

Vivid green and Alice blue seem to be the most popular colors. Khaki has gone out of favor since the ending of the war. During the last years of the world conflict it was quite stylish among the women.

Capes are somewhat prominent. One new cloak had three capes attached, one hanging below the other, almost to the hem of the dress. Each cape was bordered with what modistes call "elephant's hair." More dashing, however, are the mantillos which are thrown carelessly over the left shoulder.

It is noted that hat brims have been banned by the milliners this season. Most of the latest hats turn up sharply over the brow. Some wonderful parading plumes are worn.

On the whole, however, the honors of Longchamps go to the coat and skirt, completed with a novel waistcoat that extends half way down the length of the skirt. Generally this waistcoat is a contrast of colors, in white piqué with black spots.

The most conservative coats have high collars with little flaps under the ears.

WOUNDED SOLDIERS AT MAGRANE-HOUSTON DANCE

Twenty-five convalescent soldiers from Parker Hill Hospital were guests at a reception and dance given by the employees of the Magrane-Houston Company at Columbus Hall, Dorchester. Vessel Comes From South Africa in 24 Days; Record

The Bucknell Kandahar, commanded by Captain Crome, docked at Commonwealth Pier today after a record trip from South Africa and with a record cargo on board. The vessel made the trip from Cape Town, which usually takes one month, in twenty-four days.

The cargo consisted of $3,600,000 worth of wool and tan bark. The boat also carried three passengers, Herbert Osborne, a English missionary who was compelled first to come to America in order to return to England; also Harry Floyd, a California mining engineer, and Lemuel Samuels, a south African spice merchant.

BIG THEFTS ON SHIPS, LABOR MEN SAY

Providence, June 4.—Profiteering contractors at Hog Island Shipyard cheated the United States government of millions of dollars by charging the Emergency Fleet Corporation $5 an hour for labor which really cost but 50 or 60 cents, according to labor leaders here, who have asked for a rigid investigation.

"Criminal" is the way these union leaders characterize the financial methods of contractors and manufacturers, and they say that "these millions of which the government was looted must be made good by taxpayers, who blame organized labor for the whole thing."

The wholesale looting of the treasury was not confined to Rhode Island, according to the men making the charges, but existed in half the shipbuilding yards and war plants in the country. Beside cheating by overcharging for labor, the contractors and manufacturers sent inferior material to the government and bought material for themselves at exorbitant prices for the fleet corporation.

The favorite ruse employed in plundering the government, however, according to representatives of organized labor, was to pretend that labor unions were holding out for excessive wages, and thus justify the submission of an inferior product on the ground that it was impossible to fulfill contracts; also, the wages paid the contractors by the government rarely got to the men, who received less than half what they were supposed to be receiving, in many instances.

SAYS BENTLEY WAS SLAIN WITH BLACKJACK

Providence Political Circles Stirred by Investigation of Representative's Death

Providence, June 4.—Rhode Island's turbid politics have been stirred to the depths by the charge that political enmity, not accident, was responsible for the death of R. Court Bentley, former representative from Westerly.

The investigation to disclose the actual cause of the death of the former political leader on Easter Sunday evening is being followed with intense interest by party men. It is now charged that he was killed in a saloon brawl growing out of party differences.

The story at first given the public was that Bentley was killed in an automobile accident in the town of Davisville, on the road to Narragansett Pier. However, Fred A. Congdon, a personal friend of the politician, claims that Bentley was blackjacked after he had refused to drink with certain members of a party at The Elms at Narragansett.

It is alleged that the fight was audible to hundreds outside the inn, and that a policeman who arrived to investigate it was told by a certain boss that he had better go out by the door before he was sent through the window.

Bentley left Westerly in an automobile with State Senator Maurice Flynn and Andrew J. Martin. It is said that at Narragansett Pier he met former State Senator Thomas Barber of Richmond, Joseph Giraud and others. Besides the inquest started by the State, the police of Narragansett Pier have begun an investigation.

His report was read to the House foreign affairs committee by Assistant Secretary of State Phillips.

Save Sour Milk

DO not throw away sour milk. Keep it covered with a piece of muslin and use it for making scones; it makes them beautifully light. Another plan is to strain the sour milk through muslin, allowing it to drip for twenty-four hours; then place it in a basin, add a pinch of salt and form it into a pat; it is then cream cheese.

HEARTS OF THREE

A Thrilling Serial of Hidden Treasure, Love and Adventure

By JACK LONDON

Author of "The Call of the Wild," "The Valley of the Moon," "The Sea Wolf," "The Iron Heel," "White Fang" and Other Famous Novels

The theme of this story was suggested to the author by Charles W. Goddard.

BUT the thought of her perplexed him. He experienced more than a twinge of regret that the lovely creature belonged of right to the man who looked so much like him, and he saw again the vision of her on the beach, when, with conflicting emotions, she had alternately loved him and yearned toward him and blazed her scorn and contempt on him. He sighed involuntarily.

"What's that for?" Henry demanded quizzically.

"Leonela is an exceedingly pretty girl," Francis answered with transparent frankness. "Just the same, she's yours, and I'm going to make it my business to see that you get her. Where's that ring she returned? If I don't put it on her finger for you and be back in a week with the good news, you can cut off my mustache along with my ears."

An hour later, Captain Trefethen having sent a boat to the beach from the Angelique in response to signal, the young men were saying goodby.

"Just two things more, Francis. First—and I forgot to tell you—Leoncia is not a Solano at all, though she thinks she is. Alfaro told me himself. She is an adopted child, and old Enrico fairly worships her, though neither his blood nor his race runs in her veins. Alfaro never told me the ins and outs of it, though he did say she wasn't Spanish at all. I don't even know whether she's English or American. She talks good enough English, though she got that at convent. You see, she was adopted when she was a wee thing, and she's never known anything else than that Enrico is her father."

"And no wonder she scorned and hated me for you," Francis laughed, believing, as she did, as she still does, that you knifed her full-blooded uncle in the back.

Henry nodded and went on:

A Long Way to Go.

"The other thing is fairly important. And that's the law. In the absence of it, rather. They make it whatever they want it, down in this out-of-the-way hole. It's a long way to Panama, and the governador of this State, or district, or whatever they call it, is a pretty big pimento. The Jefe Politico at San Antonio is the man to keep an eye on. He's the little czar of the Valley of the Woods and he's some crooked hombre, take it from yours truly. Graft is too weak a word for his methods in the [illegible] deals, and [illegible] as cruel and blood-thirsty as a weasel. And his one crowning delight is an old-fashioned [illegible] a hanging. Keep your weather eye on him, whatever you do. . . . And, well, so long. And half of whatever I find on the Bull is yours . . . and see that you get that ring back on Leoncia's finger."

Two days later, after the half-breed skipper had reconnoitred ashore and brought back the news that all the men were away on the [illegible] way away, Francis had himself [illegible] on the beach where he had first met her. No sign was there of silver revolvers nor men with rifles were manifest. All was placid, and the only one on the beach was a ragged little Indian boy, who at sight of coin readily consented to carry a note to the young senorita of the hacienda. As Francis scrawled on a sheet of paper from his notebook, "I am the man who you mistook for Henry Morgan and I have a message for you from him," he little dreamed that outward happenings were about to accord with an equal rapidity and frequency as on his first visit.

For that matter, could he have peered over the bulging cheek against which he leaned his back while composing the note to Leoncia, he would have been startled by a vision of the young lady herself, emerging like a sea-goddess fresh from a swim in the sea. But he wrote calmly on, the Indian lad even more absorbed than himself in the operation, so that it was Leoncia, coming around the rock from behind, who first caught sight of him. Biting an exclamation, she turned and fled blindly into the green recesses of jungle.

His first warning of her proximity was immediately thereafter, when a startled scream of fear aroused him. Note and pencil fell to the sand as he sprang toward the direction of the cry and collided with a well- and prettily dressed young woman who was recoiling backward from whatever had caused her scream. The unexpectedness of the collision was provocative of a second startled scream from her ere she could turn and recognize that it was not a new attack, but a rescuer.

She darted past him, her face colorless from the fright, stumbled over the Indian boy, nor paused until she was out on the open sand.

"What is it?" Francis demanded. "Are you hurt? What's happened?"

She pointed at her bare knee, where two tiny drops of blood oozed forth from a side from two scarcely perceptible lacerations.

"It was a viperine," she said. "A deadly viperine. I shall be a dead woman in five minutes, and I am glad, glad, for then my heart will be tormented no more by you."

She leveled an accusing finger at him, gasped the beginning of denunciation she could not utter, and sank down in a faint.

Francis knew about the snakes of Central America merely by hearsay, but the hearsay was terrible enough. Men talked of even mules and hogs dying in horrible agony five to ten minutes after being struck by tiny reptiles fifteen to twenty inches long. Small wonder she had fainted, was his thought, with so terribly rapid a poison doubtlessly beginning to work. His knowledge of the treatment of snake-bite was likewise hearsay, but flashed through his mind the recollection of the need of a tourniquet to shut off the circulation above the wound and prevent the poison from reaching the heart.

He pulled out his handkerchief and tried to improvise one by ripping the spare ruffle in a short piece of mosquito stuff, and twisted the bandage-ring to savage tightness. Next, and all in frenzy, working swiftly, he opened the small blade of his pocket-knife, fashioned for such accidental hazards to make cuts against germs, and cut carefully but remorselessly into the two lacerations made by the snake's fangs.

He was in a fright himself working with razor-keenness and unprofessional haste, but the desire that stirred compelling within him to clasp her in his arms, "You quite recall my recollection of you before this. From which we had neard you hate me to the death, and the sweet quickly and prodigiously. Been as he finished excoriating the fang wounds he must have made up his mind next into his mouth and would suck out all the poison he possibly could, and next, light a cigarette and wire in to the end provided to squirm.

But while he was still making light, cross-cuts with the point of his knife blade she began to move restlessly.

"Lie down," he commanded, as she sat up, and not even he was bending low [illegible] reasoning slap alongside of his face from her little hand. At the same instant the head of a perfectly nice young man, whose intentions are never less than the best.

The Indian boy, returned at this moment, running with bathing wrap, which she snatched from him and put around her. "This is true? Oh, you've help, she attacked the knot again. When the handkerchief came off she flung it from her as if in truth it were a viperine.

"Then say no more, at least not now," she interrupted, pitifully. "First of all I must make amends to you, though you must confess that some of the things you have done and said were abominable, you had no right to kiss me."

"If you will remember," he contended, "I did it at the point point. How was I to know but what I would get shot if I didn't?"

"Oh, hush, hush!" she begged. "You must go with me now to the house. And you can tell me about Henry on the way."

Her eyes chanced upon the handkerchief she had flung so contemptuously aside. "Poor, ill-treated kerchief," she crooned to it. "To you also must I make amends. I shall myself launder you, and" . . . Her eyes lifted to Francis as she addressed him. "And return it to you, sir, fresh and sweet, all wrapped around my heart of gratitude."

"And the mark of the beast?" he queried.

"I am so sorry," she confessed penitently.

"And may I be permitted to rest my shadow upon you?"

"Do! Do!" she cried gayly. "There! I am your shadow now. And we must start."

Francis tossed a peso to the grinning Indian boy, and, in high elation, turned and followed her into the tropic growth on the path that led up to the white hacienda.

Seated on the broad piazza of the Solano Hacienda, Alvarez Torres saw through the tropic shrubs the couple approaching along the winding driveway. And he saw what made him grit his teeth and draw very erroneous conclusions. He muttered imprecations to himself and forgot his cigarette.

What he saw was Leoncia and Francis in such deep and excited talk as to be oblivious of everything else. He saw Francis grow so urgent of speech and gesture as to cause Leoncia to stop abruptly and listen further to his pleading. Next—and Torres could scarcely believe the evidence of his eyes, he saw Francis produce a ring, and Leoncia, with averted face, extend her left hand and receive the ring upon her third finger. Engagement finger it was, and Torres could have sworn to it.

Averse to Receiving.

What had really occurred was the placing of Henry's engagement ring back on Leoncia's hand. And Leoncia, she knew not why, had been vaguely averse to receiving it.

Torres tossed the dead cigarette away, twisted his mustache fiercely, as if to relieve his own excitement, and advanced to meet them, across the piazza. He did not return the girl's greeting at the first. Instead, with the wrathful face of the Latin, he burst out at Francis:

"One does not expect shame in a murderer, but at least one does expect simple decency."

Francis smiled wholesomely.

"Save it goes again," he said. "Another lunatic in this lunatic land. The last time, Leoncia, that I saw this gentleman, was in New York. He was really anxious to do business with me. Now I meet him here and the first thing he tells me is that I am an indecent, shameless murderer."

"Senor Torres, you must apologize," she declared angrily. "The house of Solano is not accustomed to having guests insulted."

"The house of Solano, I then understand, is accustomed to having its men murdered by transient adventurers," he retorted. "No sacrifice is too great when it is in the name of hospitality."

"Get off your feet, Senor Torres." Francis advised him pleasantly. "You are standing on it. I know what your mistake is. You think I am Henry Morgan. I am Francis Morgan, and you and I, not long ago, transacted business together in Regan's office in New York. There's my hand. Your shaking of it will be sufficient apology under the circumstances."

Torres, overwhelmed for the moment by his mistake, took the extended hand and uttered apologies both to Francis and Leoncia.

While she departed, and while Francis followed away to his room on the heels of a young and pretty mestiza woman, Torres, his brain resuming its functions, found he was more amazed and angry than ever. This, then, was a newcomer and stranger to Leoncia whom he had seen putting a ring on her engagement finger. He thought quickly and passionately for a moment. Leoncia, whom to himself he always named the queen of his dreams, had, on an instant's notice, engaged herself to a stranger Gringo from New York. It was unbelievable, monstrous.

He clapped his hands, summoned his hired carriage from San Antonio, and was speeding from the drive when Francis strolled forth to have a talk with him about further details of the hiding place of old Morgan's treasure.

After lunch, when a land breeze sprang up, which meant fair wind and a quick run across, Chrigui Lagoon and along the length of it to the Bull and the Calf, Francis, eager to bring to Henry the good word that his ring adorned Leoncia's finger, resolutely declined her proferred hospitality to remain for the night and meet Enrico Solano and his tall sons. Francis had a further reason for hasty departure. He could not endure the presence of Leoncia—and this in no sense uncomplimentary to her. She charmed him, drew him to such extent that he dared not endure her charm, and draw if he were to remain man—faithful to the man in the canvas pants even then digging holes in the sands of the Bull.

So Francis departed, a letter to Henry from Leoncia in his pocket.

From the beach Francis signalled the Angelique, riding at anchor, to send a boat ashore for him. But before it had been swung into the water half a dozen horsemen, revolver-belted, rifles across their pommels, rode down the beach upon him at a gallop. Six men led. The following four were hang-dog half-castes. Of the two leaders Francis recognized Torres. Every rifle came to rest on Francis, and he could not but obey the order, snarled at him by the unknown leader to throw up his hands.

"We want you," announced the stranger leader, whose mustache bristled as magnetically as his crooked black eyes.

"And, in the name of original sin and of all lively lizards, who might you be?"

"He is the honorable Senor Mariano Vercara e Hijos, Jefe Politico of San Antonio," Torres replied.

"Good-night," Francis laughed, remembering the man's description as given to him by Henry. "I suppose you think I've broken some harbor rule or sanitary regulation by anchoring here. But you must settle such things with my captain—Captain Trefethen, a very estimable gentleman. I am only the character of the schooner—just a passenger. You will find Captain Trefethen right up in maritime law and customs."

"You are wanted for the murder of Alfaro Solano," was Torres' answer. "You didn't fool me, Henry Morgan, with your talk up at the hacienda that you were someone else. I know that someone else. His name is Francis Morgan.

His Explanation

"Ye gods and little fishes!" Francis exclaimed. "And yet you shook hands with me, Senor Torres."

"I was fooled." Torres admitted sadly. "But only for a moment. Will you come peaceably?"

"Justice is swift in Panama," the Jefe Politico replied, his English queerly accented, but understandable. "But not so quick as that. We will not hang you at daybreak. Ten o'clock in the morning is more comfortable all around, don't you think?"

"You will kindly come with us, Senor!" Mariano Vercara Hijos said, the suavity of his diction not masking the irony of its intention. "— Juan! Ignacio!" he ordered in Spanish. "Dismount! Take his weapons. No, it will not be necessary to tie his hands. Put him on the horse behind Gregorio."

Francis, in a venerably white-washed adobe cell with walls five-feet thick, its earth floor carpeted with the forms of half a dozen sleeping peon prisoners, listened to a dim hammering not very distant, remembered the trial from which he had just emerged, and whistled long and low. The hour was half-past eight in the evening. The trial had begun at eight. The hammering was the hammering together of the scaffold beams, from which place of eminence he was scheduled at ten next morning to swing off into space supported from the ground by a rope around his neck. The trial had lasted half an hour by his watch. Twenty minutes would have covered it had Leoncia not burst in and prolonged it by the ten minutes courteously accorded her as the great lady of the Solano family.

"The Jefe was right," Francis acknowledged to himself in a mutter of soliloquy. "Panama justice does move swiftly."

The very possession of the letter given him by Leoncia and addressed to Henry Morgan damned him. The rest had been easy. Half a dozen witnesses had testified to the murder and identified him as the murderer. The Jefe Politico himself had so testified. The one cheerful note had been the eruption on the scene of Leoncia, chaperoned by a palsied old aunt of the Solano family. That had been sweet—the fight the beautiful girl had put up for his life, despite the fact that it was foredoomed to futility.

When she had made Francis roll up the sleeve and expose his left forearm, he had seen the Jefe Politico shrug his shoulders contemptuously. And he had seen Leoncia fling a passion of Spanish words, too quick for him to follow, at Torres. And he had seen and heard the gesticulation and the roar of the mob-filled courtroom as Torres had taken the stand.

Under Cover

But what he had not seen was the whispered colloquy between Torres and the Jefe, as the former was in the thick of forcing his way through the press to the witness box. He no more saw this particular side-play than did he know that Torres was in the pay of Regan to keep him away from New York and long no possible, and so long as ever if possible, nor than did he know that Torres, himself in love with Leoncia, was consumed with a jealousy that knew no limit to its ire.

All of which had blinded Francis to the play under the interrogation of the Jefe Politico, which had compelled Torres to acknowledge that he had never seen a scar on Francis Morgan's left forearm. While Leoncia had looked at the little old judge in triumph, the Jefe Politico had advanced and demanded of Torres in stentorian tones:

"Can you swear that you ever saw a scar on Henry Morgan's arm?"

Torres had been baffled and embarrassed, had looked bewilderment to the judge and pleadingness to Leoncia, and, in the end, without speech, had shaken his head that he could not swear.

The roar of triumph had gone up from the crowd of ragamuffins. The judge had pronounced sentence, the roar had doubled on itself, and Francis had been hustled out and to his cell, not entirely unresisting-ly, by the gendarmes and the commissario, all apparently solicitous of saving him from the mob that was unwilling to wait till ten next morning for his death.

"That poor dub, Torres, who fell down on the scar of Henry!" Francis was meditating sympathetically, when the bolts of his cell door shot back and he arose to greet Leoncia.

But she declined to greet him for the moment, as she flared red at the commissario in rapid fire Spanish, with gestures of command, to which he yielded when he ordered the jailor to remove the peons to other cells, and himself, with a nervous and apologetic bowing, went out and closed the door.

And then Leoncia broke down, sobbing on his shoulder, in his arms: "It is a cursed country, a cursed country. There is no fair play."

And as Francis held her pliant form, meltingly exquisite in its maddingness of woman, he remembered Henry, in his canvas pants, barefooted, under his floppy sombrero, digging holes in the sand of the Bull.

He tried to draw away from the armful of deliciousness, and only half succeeded. Still, at such slight removal of distance he essayed the intellectual part, rather than the emotional part he desired all too strongly to act.

"And now I know at last what a frame-up is," he assured her, farthest from the promptings of his heart. "If these Latins of your country thought more coolly instead of acting so passionately, they might be building railroads and developing their country. That trial was a straight, passionate frame-up. They just knew I was guilty, and were so eager to punish me that they wouldn't even bother for more evidence or establishment of identity. Why delay? They knew Henry Morgan had knifed Alfaro. They knew I was Henry Morgan. When one knows, why bother to find out?"

Deaf to his words, sobbing and struggli, g to cling closer while he spoke, the moment he had finished she was deep again in his arms, against him, to him, her lips raised to his, and ere he was aware, his own lips to hers.

"I Love You"

"I love you, I love you," she whispered brokenly.

"No, no," he denied what he most desired, "Henry and I are too alike. It is Henry you love, and I am not Henry."

She tore herself away from her own clinging, drew Henry's ring from her finger, and threw it on the floor.

She stiffened herself proudly, and all broke down again as Francis slipped Henry's ring back on her finger and kissed her hand in farewell. Just as she passed out of the door she turned and, with a whispered movement of the lips that was devoid of sound, she told him; "I love you."

Promptly at the stroke of the clock, at 10 o'clock, Francis was led out into the jail patio, where stood the gallows. All San Antonio was joyously and shoutingly present, including much of the neighboring population and Leoncia, Enrico Solano, and his five tall sons. Enrico and his sons fumed and strutted, but the Jefe Politico, backed by the comisario and his gendarmes, was adamant.

They had tied Francis' legs, and were in the act of tying his arms, with the men who held the noose and the black cap hovering near to put them on him, when the voice of a singer was heard approaching from without, and the song he sang was:

"Back to back against the mainmast.

Held at bay the entire crew"—

Leoncia, almost fainting, recovered at the sound of the voice, and cried out. All San Antonio was as she described Henry Morgan entering, thrusting aside the guards at the gate who tried to bar his way.

At sight of him the only one present who suffered chagrin was Torres, which passed unnoticed in the excitement. The populace was in accord with the Jefe, who shrugged his shoulders and announced that one man's life was as good as another so long as the hanging went on. And here arose hot contention from the Solano host that Henry was likewise innocent of the murder of Alfaro. But it was Francis, from the scaffold, while his arms and legs were being untied, who shouted through the tumult:

"You tried me! You have not tried him! You cannot hang a man without trial! He must have his trial!"

And when Francis had descended from the scaffold and was shaking Henry's hand in both his own, the comisario, with the Jefe at his back, duly arrested Henry Morgan for the murder of Alfaro Solano.

What Has Happened in the Story So Far

FRANCIS MORGAN, a young New York millionaire, heavily interested in oil, decides to take a vacation and drops into the office of his father's old associate, Thomas Regan, a Wall Street operator. Regan has long had a grudge to pay for a raw deal from the elder Morgan. He sees a chance to get even with the young man by suggesting that he might be interested in a search for the treasure of the buccaneer Sir Henry Morgan, the secret hiding place of which he (Regan) has reason to believe is known to Alvarez Torres, an adventurer. Francis jumps at the idea, arranges with Torres to go to Central America and proceeds alone, Torres to follow. Once there he hires a schooner and starts for the scene of the supposed hidden treasure. He sees on the shore a girl looking at him through a glass and rows ashore. To his surprise the girl, who is very beautiful, seizes his arm and pulls him toward the jungle, apparently to get him out of some danger. Then she sends him away, begs him for a kiss and watches him go as three Spaniards appear and shoot at him. He sails to an island held by Henry Morgan, also a descendant of the pirate. The girl who kissed Francis proves to be engaged to Henry. The men come to blows, but afterward make up.

Biggest Piano Floor in Boston---Biggest Bargains

TEN years ago I was doing business in a little bit of a store away out in Roxbury—725 Shawmut Avenue—I had nothing but a selling idea, but it was a good one. "Selling any make piano, either new or used, for less than anyone else will sell it," that was my idea then and it is the basis of my selling plan today. I AM SELLING, in this big "Save a Hundred Dollars" Piano Sale, all makes of pianos lower than anyone in the piano business. The remarkable growth of my business is due to the fact that I save the people a lot of money in the buying of their pianos.

Sincerely, J. P. COLLINS.

Lawrence, June 4.—Flags awarded in connection with the various Liberty Loan drives have been received by Mayor John J. Hurley on behalf of the citizens of Lawrence. The city oversubscribed its quota by approximately $7,000,000 in all the drives. This city closes its Salvation Army drive today with the the expectation that a $2,500 deficit to make up the quota of $36,000 will be forthcoming from promised sources.

LUMBER GOING UP; BUILD NOW' SAYS EXPERT

Demand for Housing Increases Day by Day, Declares J. Edward Downes

"Opportunity knocks at the door. Opportunity is at this moment knocking at your door. Opportunity is no less a person than Mr. Build Now. Will you answer his knock?"

One of Boston's biggest building experts says we ought to be on tiptoe for the big building boom that is due to head itself this way in the next couple of months. He says build now and avoid the crush.

"I am not issuing any warning, but I am giving a little advice through the American, which is conducting a commendable campaign to Build Now," said J. Edward Downes, treasurer of the Downes Lumber Company, with main offices at No. 470 Harrison avenue.

"If the readers of the American can be made to realize that prices of building, including labor, will not be materially reduced in a period of years, the American is doing a real service toward the end of civic betterment.

LUMBER FACES ADVANCE.

"One of the main commodities in building residences or industrial structures is lumber," said Mr. Downes, who has had twenty years' experience in the lumber business.

"The demand for housing is not only increasing day by day, but hour by hour. The demand for homes is increasing on the same basis. Lumber will go higher. It has not reached its highest peak yet, and the demand is greater now than the supply. New England is behind in the big building activity which is moving the country generally, and especially the Middle West, but it is safe to assume that when the big boom strikes Boston and New England the activity in building will be greater than anything that can be now contemplated. When this boom reaches us the price of lumber will go higher to a prohibitory point.

"Why not build a home now while the buying is good?

"Prices certainly will not be lower, and this includes rents.

LOGS ARE LACKING.

"So far as the lumber business is concerned, the railroads have not bought any lumber in the past two years but today the railroads are in the market for millions of feet of lumber and they cannot get it because of lack of logs. The reason for the lack of logs is that the government in the war used up lumber as fast as it could be used, and also because of the lack of labor, due to war conditions. At the same time lumber imports have been paralyzed since 1914. Our principal import of lumber were from Norway, Russia and from Africa which supplied fancy woods such as mahogany.

"When I say, 'Build Now,' I wish to emphasize certain facts about our local building. One of them is that South America is getting lumber in large quantities which could and should be used for building here. Large quantities of lumber also is going to Europe, but South America is getting five times as much of American lumber as Europe is receiving. The point is, however, that we are furnishing homes elsewhere—we are not feathering our own nest.

"I have advised all my friends to build now, realizing that the man who does not build now will lose in time and money. There will be a tremendous demand in the early Fall for apartments and houses. I would like to ask a question, 'Where are we going to put the people when they return from the beaches and Summer residences in the Fall?' It stands to reason we will not have the place to put them, or, rather, we will not have the places where they can find accommodations for themselves.

BE READY FOR RUSH.

"Build Now and have your place when the Fall rush begins. How long must the people be told that that prices of labor and building materials will not come down to prewar levels? Cannot the people realize for themselves that prices are not coming down and that consequently now is the time to build? If the prices of food remain high and the wages of labor fail to decrease, as is certain, WE SHOULD BEGIN TO ACCUSTOM OURSELVES TO WAR PRICES. Personally I do not believe we can do this until the building boom hits New England and then it will be a horse of a different color. People will be rushing in search of places to live in.

POLICE PITFALLS FOR SPEEDERS LOCATED

Out-of-Town Traps Described by the Automobilist, A. L. A. Publication

Police activities against autoists who disobey the laws continue. The location of Boston traps now existing has been printed. Out of town traps should be watched by tourists and the Automobilist, official organ of the A. L. A., gives the following information concerning traps in other nearby cities:

MARLBORO.

"Overspeeding is not countenanced by the police of this city. On East Main, Main and West Main streets, going towards Lake Williams, traps are being operated for overspeeding. A squad of officers are stationed at intervals along these thoroughfares each Sunday operating speed traps. Do not drive faster than twenty miles an hour. At the junction of Main and Mechanics streets a trap is being operated for failure to slow down to eight miles an hour and give a proper warning.

FALL RIVER.

"On the main highway from this city to New Bedford the State automobile inspectors are enforcing the headlight dimming law. This campaign will be continued for an indefinite period.

SPRINGFIELD.

"A drive against violaters of the speed law near the armory on State street has been started by Colonel J. D. Hubbell, commandant of the armory. Notices have been posted limiting the speeding of motor vehicles in this locality to ten miles an hour. Many motorists have been hitting it up to twenty-five and thirty miles an hour, and accordingly Commandant Hubbell has been obliged to act. Deputy United States Marshal Leyden of this city has been assigned to summon a large number of car owners into court.

"The local police are prosecuting motorists who have not equipped their cars with some headlight dimming device. This crusade will be carried on for an indefinite period.

"The local police are making arrests for violation of the recent ordinance of the Board of Aldermen, which prohibits a horse-strawn or motor vehicle standing in certain of the main thoroughfares over five minutes during certain hours of the morning and the noon hour, and not over ten minutes at other times. The police have posted signs warning persons of this new ordinance.

NORTHBORO.

"Attention is called to a crusade started by the authorities of this town to stamp out reckless driving through the main streets. Since the automobile accident on East Main street, Saturday night, May 17, the selectmen and police have been aroused and intend to enforce the automobile laws rigidly. The manner in which automobiles have been driven around curves and corners has caused apprehension among the townspeople. Selectmen of the town say that some machines have been travelling between 40 and 60 miles an hour when making a curve, and that from now on motorists passing through Northboro must drive at a rate of speed that will not endanger the lives of the public.

BROCKTON.

"The campaign of the local police for violations of the automobile laws and city ordinances which was started a few weeks ago is still in force. Sixty motorists were summoned to court one day recently charged with overspeeding, allowing cars to stand on Main street with lights extinguished, not slowing down and sounding the horn at intersections of ways and for violation of the headlight dimming law.

AYER.

"The police of this town have been working a trap to catch speeders entering the village. Those going over twenty miles an hour are liable to prosecution. A number of arrests have been reported on Sunday afternoon going in the direction of Camp Devens.

PAWTUCKET, R. I.

"Two officers in khaki on red Indian motorcycles are prosecuting motorists who drive faster than fifteen miles an hour on West avenue and are also active on the road coming from Boston. Massachusetts motorists seem to be the principal victims of these officers, although hundreds of jitneys and privately owned motor cars with Rhode Island number plates are permitted to run along at any old speed. It is difficult to identify the khaki-clad officers as they wear their police badge under their sleeve above the wrist. We have also been informed that an officer in Providence dressed in a blue uniform is also conducting an active campaign against Massachusetts motorists who violate the speed law on the main highway entering that city from Massachusetts."

FEW USE PARKING SPACE IN CHARLES STREET

What's the matter with the new Charles street parking space? Now that the west side of this street has been thrown open by the street commissioners as an unlimited parking space, very few motorists are taking advantage of it. In the afternoon, when hundreds of people drive in to shop or attend the theatres scarcely a dozen cars can be found in this stretch which will easily accommodate 150 machines. All that is needed is a locking device for your car and Charles street is as safe as a garage.

Jones: Some Pep! This don't seem like your old car, Bill.

Bill: The same one only I took the jinx out of it with a Webber Carburetor. I wouldn't think of selling it now.

ASK MR. FIXIT

Mr. Fixit—What, in your opinion, is the most economical driving speed for an automobile, considering gasoline, tires, etc?
J. S. S., Medfield.

Twenty miles per hour. It is also the legal speed in most places in this section.

Dear Mr. Fixit—I have a car which has been standing idle for three years and which I am going to place in commission. The inside of the water jackets is badly rusted and I have been trying to find some way to get at it. Can you help me?
L. H., Chelmsford.

Fill it with vinegar and let it stand for three days. This will cut the rust.

Dear Mr. Fixit—Do you know what hotels in the mountains are open now? What would you suggest for a three day trip of the White Mountains?
M. L. A., Arlington.

Most of the big houses are not open yet, but most of them have small annex which are open. For a three day trip make North Conway the first night. Harry Randall has a good house there which is open; the second day go up through the Crawford Notch, cross to Twin Mountain and down the Franconia Notch to Plymouth. The Pemigewasset is open, and the third day come in from Plymouth via the lake, Concord, Manchester, Lowell, etc., to Boston. It makes a nice three day trip and the roads, for this season of the year are excellent. Going as it is better to go by Portsmouth, Rochester, Ossipee, etc.

Dear Mr. Fixit—Do you know of anything which will take the rust (or off the hands?
E. D., Dorchester.

This same question was answered for somebody three weeks ago. Read the column. Spirits of turpentine will remove it.

Dear Sir—Can you tell me the gear ratio of the Overland Model 83?
H. F., Somerville.

It is 4.61 to 1.

Dear Mr. Fixit—The engine on my car has recently developed a blasting noise which I cannot locate. Can you suggest what it might be?
S. S., South Boston.

It might be either a broken or loose spark plug, a broken or loose priming cup or cock, a Bullock or other valve in the motor. A valve cage may not be screwed down tightly or it is the carretor causing the air.

Sir—What will stop a carburetor from dripping?
P. H. O., Malden.

This is caused by the needle valve not seating properly or a sluggish fuel. Examine the needle valve and if it needs it have it ground. If the fuel is sluggish and does not come up properly, dry it thoroughly and give it a coat of shellac.

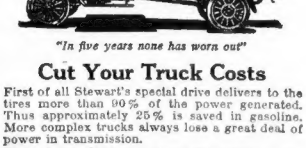
J. C. L. Ashmont, Mass. Answering your inquiry regarding accident insurance for chauffeurs. Any reliable accident insurance company will give you all this information. Accident policies are made out in classes or risks according to the occupation of the insured.

Dear Sir—Here is my trouble. I can't seem to go more than fifteen miles an hour without it acts if thumping in my motor, not exactly a knock, but the faster I go the worse it gets. Under fifteen miles I do not get the thump. What is the matter?
J. J. D., Lawrence.

I believe your trouble is a worn wrist-pin. At low speed you do not get this sound because there is not much pull on the motor. Going up hill at twenty there is just pull enough on the piston to keep the pin from pounding. If you increased your speed up the hill you would get the knock also just the same as you get it at high speed on the level. If it were a loose connecting rod you would get the sound all the time. A new wrist-pin will probably end your troubles. Also see that your clutch is not loose on the shaft.

Dear Mr. Fixit—My engine appears to be losing power. It runs smoothly but is weak, especially on hills. What, in your judgment, is the matter?
H. G., Cambridge.

The principal causes of loss of power are poor compression, leaky valves, improper mixture and faulty ignition. Look to these four first. Other causes are dragging brakes, deranged oil system, weak valve springs or clogged gasoline passages.



"In five years none has worn out"

Cut Your Truck Costs

First of all Stewart's special drive delivers to the tires more than 90% of the power generated. Thus approximately 25% is saved in gasoline. More complex trucks always lose a great deal of power in transmission.

Stewart has eliminated about 700 useless parts. We don't have to make these parts, nor pay to have them assembled. Needless expense saved there. You get the benefit in the $200 to $300 lower cost.

This simplified design also accounts for Stewart's records in longest continuous service. Fewer parts to wear out. Special spring system which absorbs all road shocks, saving tire and truck wear.

Auto Drivers Resent Action of Mayor of Quincy

Mayor Joseph Whitton of Quincy, in order to stop the motor accidents which have occurred in his city with unbecoming frequency, has issued orders to the police which have resulted in a Spring outburst of policemen along the streets through Quincy.

Automobilists who use Quincy streets on their way to the Cape and the beaches are said to resent this action, as it indicates that in the opinion of Quincy authorities there are to blame. These autoists insist that the poor construction of Adams street from the New Haven bridge to the East Milton railroad station, with its high crown and steep pitch into the gutters has been responsible for more accidents than any fast or reckless driving there.

COBB TO QUIT BASEBALL FOR AUTO BUSINESS

Marshall, and automobile fans alike will be interested in the announcement that "Ty" Cobb is leaving the game for the automobile business. Terris has closed a deal with a Toledo concern, it is said, and will become a distributor for a starting device for Ford cars after the present season. His territory will be South Carolina, Georgia and Alabama.

SENATORS AND SOX IN FINAL

Washington, June 4.—What Manager Clark Griffith, of the Washington club, is up against in seeking material to strengthen his team is shown by the difficulty Manager Barrow of the Red Sox is having in his search for an outfielder.

The idea of Hugh Jennings turning down a trade of Meimnis for Veach, made recently while the Red Sox were in Detroit, can hardly be believed here, as the Washington experts rank Scotty as the best ever at the initial bag—and oh, how he hits on these grounds!

It is the Boston pilot's intention to send the Red Sox of Ruth's great pitching prowess to terminating Babe's garden duties and permitting him to devote his attention exclusively to box work with occasional flings at pinch-hitting.

It is necessary to corral a flychaser to put this plan into effect, however, and, despite diligent searching and a stack of certified checks, Barrow has been unable to locate the man he is after and needs so badly.

To date Ruth has nothing but wins to his credit as a hurler—four—counters—four—but he cannot continue to double up on pitching and garden work and do himself justice in the box.

Barrow has about concluded that left-handed pitchers of the ability of the big Baltimorean are too valuable to spell in everwork, but until he can find a capable outfielder, who can somewhat approximate Ruth's batting calibre, the mighty Babe will continue to do the labor of two men.

Yesterday was Melo and Scott day, somewhat helped along by Ray Caldwell. The big fellow was hit harder by the Senators than ever before, but they couldn't none across with the singles frequent enough, and the Red Sox got the verdict, 4-3.

Melnnis and Scott made six of the ten hits recorded by the Red Sox, and Huffy pointed two runs and Everett one, a nice day's work for the two little fellows.

Caldwell continued his jinx against the Senators. It seems impossible for the locals to trim him, and the fact should not be lost sight of that they got better as the game went along.

Barrow said he would probably send Ruth in today, with a chance that Pennock may get the final call. Thompson or Ayers are the most likely pitchers for the locals, as Walter Johnson no longer has any terrors for the Bostonians.

CESTONE RACES LOGAN IN BOW AT REVERE

Vito Cestone, Manager Nat Butler's new sprint champion, has selected Veteran Patsy Logan of South Boston for his victim in his initial race at the Revere Beach oval tonight.

They are to clash in an unlimited race. Cestone is billed as a world beater and he will have to be at his best to down the Peninsula champion.

In the motor-paced race, over the 20-mile course, Clarence Carman will make his debut against George Wiley and Young Howker, the Lynn youngster, who showed so much promise in his first start Memorial Day.

Baseball News and Notes

Jimmy Frazee, proprietor of the Red Sox, is reported to be in Philadelphia today making his final effort to induce Connie Mack to part with Bobby Veach. Frazee, 'tis carelessly reported, stands willing to give Mack $10,000 and a flock of players for the heavy-hitting outfielder.

The Tigers keep going. Monday they took two falls out of the White Sox and yesterday annexed another combat. Dauss landed right side up in his duel with the attenuated Lowdermilk, thanks to Ty Cobb making two sensational catches with the bases intoxicated.

That was a wild contest the Yankees won from the Mackmen. The tally was 19 to 9, twenty-four hits were smashed out, six errors piled up and seven pitchers used. Ernie Shore was credited with the victory, when Ward batted for him, tore off a safety, and Tillie Walker allowed the ball to go hopping on to the fence.

SCHOOL CREWS SHOW CLASS IN TRIALS

The trial heats in the annual regatta of the Boston Interscholastic Rowing Association failed to produce any surprises. Incidentally, they offered some glistening sport.

The first heat was won by the Rindge Tech crew, which got away in front and held its lead to the finish. Boston College High finished second, half a length back.

In the second race a false start was made and English signaled for a new "break." The boats were called back by the referee but the only one to return was English High. The others continued, with Brookline winning and Commerce second.

It was first decided to have another race, but finally agreed upon to allow the two who qualified in the race to enter the finals, together with English. Hence the finals will have five crews in action.

As was expected, the Huntington School crew came in a winner in its heat. It got away to the best start and held the lead throughout, ending up with a long, steady stroke. Rindge Tech, Huntington School's nearest rivals, was two lengths back.

In the fourth race Boston Latin got away to a fine start, but was unable to hold its advantage, Brookline High was the winner, coming in a length and half of Commerce. The Rindge oarsmen took his crew way out of the course, giving it a much longer distance to travel, which primarily was the cause of its defeat.

The finals will be run off tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, starting opposite the B. A. A. boathouse.

SCHOOLBOY SPORTS

GEORGE LAVERTY, SOMERVILLE HIGH SCHOOL BASEBALL STAR.

GEORGE LAVERTY started out this season at first base for the Somerville High team, but was shifted to the outfield owing to his shortness of build. This is his third year at the high school and he will return in the Fall.

Fred Sawyer, Newton High's crack pitcher, by going to Hebrin Wagner's team at Portland, is going to cause some colleges to lose a good player. A hitting twirler of his ability would be a great help to any of the big college nines.

* * *

Eddie Cohen, who has been doing such good work on the East Boston track team in the intermediate division, has been ruled a senior. He will scarcely compete in the coming games.

* * *

Rowing at Huntington School will be taken up in earnest next year, as two four-oared and one eight-oared shells have been purchased. Manager Flinner is already predicting a big season on the river in 1920.

HARVARD CREWS OFF FOR RED TOP FRIDAY

The Harvard rowing squad will leave Friday afternoon for the Connecticut rowing quarters at Red Top, where the two weeks' interim will be spent before the annual regatta with Yale.

Charley Hart, rigger, and Freeman Mosher, engineer of the John Harvard, leave tomorrow to superintend the unloading of the shells and launch.

Percival Howe, former crew manager, who is assistant graduate treasurer of the H. A. A., will accompany the crews and will be in charge at Red Top.

The crews are made up thusly:

First Varsity—Stroke, Delmar Leighton, '19; No. 7, Norman Brazer, '19; No. 6, D. H. Morris, '21; No. 5, John P. Linder, '19; No. 4, Captain Fred B. Whitman, '19; No. 3, Sherman Dagon, '21; No. 2, Charles F. Batchelder, '20; bow, Wendell Davis, '21; coxswain, E. L. Pierson, '21.

Second Varsity—Stroke, R. Jenney, '21; No. 7, Thomas A. Pond, '21; No. 6, F. H. Leibrich, '21; No. 5, M. Sedgwick, '21; No. 4, George Batchelder, '19; No. 3, E. S. Brewer, '19; No. 2, F. R. Chandler, '21; bow, C. W. Greenough, '20; coxswain, B. N. Durfee, '19.

Freshman—Stroke, M. Draper; No. 7, C. Garland; No. 6, L. R. McCagg; No. 5, Lawrence Terry; No. 4, E. K. Duncan; No. 3, Keith Kane; No. 2, L. B. LaFarge; bow, G. M. Appleton; coxswain, D. D. Miller. Halliwell Brown and N. Cabot have been chosen as substitutes.

BILL NOLAN TO GO AFTER NEW '220' MARK

The trials in the eleventh annual outdoor meet of the Boston City High and Latin schools were to be held this afternoon at Wood Island Park, starting at 4 o'clock.

The relay races, originally booked for today, have been postponed until tomorrow. The field events will also take place tomorrow, while the finals will be staged on Tech Field Friday.

This will be the final appearance of many popular junior stars as high school runners. Bill Nolan was to don his track suit for the last time as a member of the East Boston High School track team and aimed to lower the mark for the "220," now held by Elmer Smith, of Commerce. In the indoor meet Nolan set up a new mark for the "300," also held by Smith.

Ralph Colson and Jim Hickey, the Commerce flier, should set a hot pace in the century dash. These two boys are considered the best in the city and a fine race should result when they come together in the finals.

Desperate Days in Olde Virginia

"Dear Father:—You will be in a pother about my long delay. I arrived here late Tuesday night after an encounter with wolves in the woods about 7 miles west of the river. I have fortunately secured four pounds of choice seeds of tobacco, but I cannot fetch them until the mare is recovered from the cruel work of the wolves."

—A Virginia letter of 1647

VIRGINIA tobacco makes the best-tasting cigarette

Virginia cigarettes have a zest, a relish and an appetizing freshness that smokers of other cigarettes never get at all.

But, to enjoy Virginia tobacco at its best, smoke it straight—not mixed with other tobaccos. Only then do you get Virginia's full flavor and all of that keen relish that makes a cigarette a smoke.

Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

The Virginia Cigarette

Piedmont

NOTE—Virginia tobacco is grown here in the U. S. A. Unlike foreign-grown tobaccos it carries no import duty. Import duty doesn't make a cigarette any better—it merely adds to its cost. Piedmonts give you better value because all your money buys tobacco quality.

DEMPSEY WON RECOGNITION OF NEW YORK MANAGER

COPYRIGHT, 1919, BY DAMON RUNYON

The roaming fever was again steaming in Dempsey's veins From Salida, and the fight with Young Hector, he faced eastward once more, attended by the faithful "Liz" Fisher. They were both young, had money in their pockets, and nothing on their minds

They journeyed to Philadelphia, where Fisher had a brother, and they sought battle for Dempsey in the city of Brotherly Love There was nothing doing. "Who's Dempsey?" asked the promoters, acidly Then they traveled to New York, Fisher's brother making it a trio

They lived a little each day [illegible] they went along, and presently they found their bankroll growing most emaciated. Too many people were leaning against it Dempsey tried to [illegible] up a match in New York, but was unsuccessful For Dempsey had [illegible] of both in favor of his old friend, John the Barber. Dempsey knew [illegible] was [illegible] forgotten. Jack said [illegible] that [illegible] he was but I was feeling in his bones that we'd better get out of [illegible] The New York promoters were years of putting [illegible] to [illegible] houses they stood. Jack the Barber would step in and stop them [illegible] as he had heard rumors of that [illegible] That and the fact that they didn't seem to like Jack any out of a card!

BANKROLL GETTING THIN.

Meantime, our hero and his friends the Fishers were living at the Palace Hotel, up on the "Broadway Portion" and the bankroll continued growing [illegible] and wan

A agent dropped in on them in the person of Bob Devere the heavyweight fighter A agent is a guest and a heavyweight fighter your self rather, too was quite light in the vest and when he added Dempsey to the load the [illegible] which was ing it and began showing [illegible] Dempsey a couple of [illegible]

John the Barber heard that Dempsey was in town and at once [illegible] John at [illegible] had a vivid recollection of that something he had seen in Dempsey which impelled John months before to get Jack John Henry in that contract A message reached Dempsey at the Palace asking him to call on John the Barber, and [illegible] sensational tenor

A more level person than Dempsey might well have [illegible] about you'll [illegible] a expert care as eager to reach the cutlery but Jack blew boodle into John's shop one day, and then had a talk

"You remember," said Jack "I told you he had promised [illegible] 50 or 25 per cent of the gate for the first mixed bout in New York after the lifting of the ban on such affairs Well, I figured he still owed me $900, as he had paid me $100. When we had the confab he said he would pay me the $900 all right if I would sign a new contract I guess he'll hear about me not being of age when I signed the first one

ADMITS SIGNING CONTRACT.

"Well, I agreed with him, and he took me out and bought me some new clothes and gave me a lot of consideration but he didn't give me [illegible] stories He wanted me to fight Jack Moran and he took me over to [illegible] the night Moran fought Gilbert Stanton the Chicago [illegible] But he didn't give me [illegible] and he didn't give me enough to eat in a week there was four of us, who just naturally had to eat

"I've always been a good eater, and [illegible] I heard there was [illegible] who ate Bob Devere certainly did swing a mighty mean knife and fork

"When, finally, Jack the Barber went around to John, the Barb, and told him how he had certain claims on me, Jack [illegible] Le hail the claims. He did have some, at that. He had claims on me to find him something to eat Well of course John the Barb hadn't heard about these claims before, and it seems he didn't want anybody but himself to be holding claims on me, so he bought Liz's claims for $100

"We all did quite a bit of eating when we got that dough. Jes, sir, we ate freely. But," Jack says, "we couldn't see how we were going to get any more money after that was gone, and a hundred bucks hasn't last four fellows forever. We owed room rent, and the hotel people were commencing to look us over carefully

"I was determined I would not fight [illegible] in the Barber until I got all I figured was coming to me, so Liz Fisher and I decided to strike West. We got out the old

By March Dempsey's pans that from [illegible] he had not [illegible] Liz dragged the wardrobe trunk [illegible] had brought East with him From the suitcases they produced pants and coats of that hue of mal nife red by which you might call the laboring classes when engaged in toil, and denominated overalls

"I see were Western young men of vast foresight When a Western young man of foresight gets a travelling he stows an overall lay out in his suitcase from force of habit Or at least, it was commonly done in my day

Then when a forecasted young [illegible] money runs out he can don the overalls, put his good clothes in the suitcase express the suitcase prepaid, to where he is going and go there himself, fully overall Nature of the genius of travel via freight, or on the [illegible] of a passenger train

THE EMERGENCY OVERALLS.

After he gets [illegible] he can step around to the express office and get his suitcase, fold a pair of overalls in change and wash up, and behold! He is as one who has just leaped out of a bandbox, and he has saved railroad fare

It was a plan which has long appealed to [illegible] young men I wouldn't be at all surprised to find that Jack Dempsey continues the custom of carrying a set of overalls in his gripsack, one really never knows when one is going to need such things

In the instance I am talking about now, Dempsey and Fisher went over to Hoboken and caught a westbound train They rode away from this city [illegible] looking it, which is to say, they were on top of a passenger coach, and New York was no more of [illegible] for quite a spell He was again a hobo

RIDING ON THE RODS.

Despite the fact that he was by no means a railroad man, "Liz" Fisher was a great hand at "doing," so Dempsey says Jack had to teach him all the fine points of the game

He just naturally wasn't gifted for "doing," says Jack "He got better as we went along, but he certainly was a dog to begin with He was a good kid, though, and a fine pal

When they reached Kansas City they found that the Morris-Moran fight had fallen through There was nothing in prospect for them around Kansas City in any line and by this time their money had given out.

They were living as best they could, which wasn't so good at that," says Jack but cold weather had come on and they were in rather desperate straits Finally Fisher suggested that they go on to Pueblo Colorado, where his people had a ranch, and spend the Winter there.

(To Be Continued.)

The Love Gambler

War Hero Left Fortune Provided He Weds Certain Girl

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

CHAPTER XII.

"PLEASE, ma'am, the car is at the door."

Norah made the announcement to her mistress, who was in front of her mirror fastening on her hat and veil.

"And please, ma'am," the girl added shyly, "both boys awful fine in his new uniform."

Despite the situation Stanford "Uniform! Yes, I mean his livery, Norah."

"Oh, yes, ma'am. I was what I meant. Well, when soldiers are in uniform they look very much finer, don't they? Sailors does look very fine in navy blue, very I couldn't be positive."

Desiree regarded the maid gravely. It was quite true that she did speak so freely of Stanford Smith to the Leighton family. For a year, and she had never given the slightest encouragement to the former's attentions. Norah had supposed that Norah had flirted with him in a mild way—but had not detected her doing so. It was plain that Smith had, to Desiree, more than he pretended. She liked the girl and trusted her to smile her.

"I am glad if the new uniform looks well," Desiree answered gravely.

Praise from Nora

"Yes—he looks fine in the blue color—very dark. It's new—like the blue in the flag, you know. And his overcoat has a cape. It's very different from the kind he was wearing. I suppose the new law governed that. He looked very handsome, I'm glad to say, miss, for your friend."

"Now, Norah, I have asked you then stepped out of the room. Her father had started for the office, considerably annoyed by Smith's having been in the house on such a ridiculous pretext as to escort Desiree to church.

"Tea, ma'am," Norah was waiting, respectfully.

"Nothing, Desiree said. I am glad Smith has a good one to wear.

"He had it made, I suppose, I want one. I guess he thought it was time he did. I'm afraid I have made him vain when he came up in the old clothes. He looks quite well in his new uniform."

As she stood before the mirror Desiree felt herself color. "Did you tell him I was married?

The girl replied: "Why, yes, ma'am, I did tell him. When I opened the door for him I told him he mustn't call on me."

Desiree did not answer. Were I in your place Norah," she warned, "I would not be too free with a man who will be away so much. You know Smith—"

"No, ma'am, I mean, I don't know any harm by it."

"And there was no harm in the young man's having a pleasant evening. But I should like to say, you be careful, Norah."

She went down the stairs, chiding herself for her unnecessary words to her maid. Norah was a pretty chap. Did she feel any more than a passing fancy for the young man? She was not afraid that Norah would take advantage of the girl's shyness.

Indignant at the thought, it was the latter suggestion Smith was responsible for, now a week ago.

What Is the Ideal Modern Husband?

THE war has wrought many changes in the social and economic life of our country.

It has taught women to assert their equality with men and enabled them to prove it in a thousand different fields.

It has given to men a new insight into the capabilities of their wives, their mothers, their sweethearts and their sisters.

Hundreds of thousands of girls under the impulse of financial independence have thrown aside their old notions of what an ideal husband should be and now judge him by new standards.

Exactly what is the ideal modern husband?

The Boston American invites its girl and women readers to send in their ideas on this interesting question.

A prize of $25 will be awarded for the letter which, in the opinion of the judge, embodies the clearest and most unbiased answer. For the letter adjudged second best $10 will be awarded, and for the letter adjudged third best $5.

The decisions will be made by Beatrice Fairfax.

Confine your letter to 200 words, write on one side of the paper only and give your name and address. Only initials will be used if you so prefer.

The contest closes Saturday noon, June 7. No letters received after that date will be considered. The announcement of the winners will be made during the week of June 16.

A Gingham Parasol

Latest Novelty for Summer to Go With Hats of Same Material

By Rita Stuyvesant.

ONE can tell that the Summer will soon be here, for gingham hats have made their appearance, accompanied by the latest novelty, the gingham parasol. A well-known shop on Fifth avenue recently attracted an enthusiastic crowd of women by displaying some clever parasols of homely Scotch plaid ginghams. Some striking effects were obtained by matching the colorings of the plaid. Worn with a white tricolette or linen frock, these gingham hats and parasols promise to enjoy an immense popularity.

These sport hats are very simple to make, if one is at all "handy." A becoming bucram frame, sailor style, can be purchased from 75 cents up. About a yard of gingham is required, and of course there are all qualities from 19 cents to $1.50. However, it does not pay to select to cheap a material for the hat, as the sun is likely to fade it in a short time.

To cover the shape, cut two circular pieces to fit the brim, one to cover the top and one for the underside. Slash the centre of the circles and, beginning at the under crown, firmly pin the material to place and carefully smooth it toward the edge of the hat. Here it should be neatly turned under and pinned at short intervals all around.

The top of the brim is covered in a similar manner and the edge of the hat should be slip-stitched. A quarter of an inch binding of linen in a matching shade makes a smart finish.

Have you ever thought of recovering your old parasol with new material? After you have made a gingham hat, you can make a parasol to match. The simplest way is to carefully remove the old cloth soiled covering from the frame and use it as a pattern. You must allow for French seams, and make these as neat and small as possible. The edge should be finished with a very narrow hem. It is a simple matter to resew the covering to the frame, but one must have it fit very accurately.

If you are clever in matching the plaid, you would have three or four color circles on your parasol, beginning with a small one at the centre top and larger ones toward the outside. It is always advisable to shrink the gingham before using, so that it won't puckered if you are caught in a Summer shower.

A Belated Warning

A naval officer, wishing to bathe in a Ceylon river, asked a native to show him a place where there were no alligators. The native took him to a pool close to the estuary. The officer enjoyed the dip. While drying himself he asked his guide why there were never any alligators in that pool. "Because, sir," the Cingalese replied, "they 'fraid of sharks."

Stocks Strong in New York at End of Morning

RAILS ADVANCE, MOTORS ARE HIGHER

American Woolen Common Made Largest Gain in Early Trading

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were strong in New York at noon, after a morning in which advance was general. At the opening prices ruled higher and there was no recession of consequence during the first hour or later. At the beginning nervousness was apparent, but it soon wore off. Motors were a strong group from the start, and in the second hour rails moved upward, led by Reading and Southern Pacific. Steels were not conspicuous, but most of them sold at higher prices. Crucible was the leader for strength. U. S. Steel had a confined range, but showed a small gain most of the time. Trading was active and more orderly than before this week. Late morning American Woolen common had lost about half of its big gain.

The strongest stocks included Studebaker, General Motors, Reading, Southern Pacific, Mexican Petroleum, Fan-American, Sinclair, American International, Marine common and preferred, American Tel. and Tel. and Pacific. They were up from one to more than five points. At its highest Studebaker had advanced 7 points.

PRICES HIGHER AT OPENING.

Contrary to expectation of many traders stocks were strong at the opening in most instances and a number advanced a point or more on first sales. Undismayed by the break in prices on Tuesday many speculators were prompt to buy, the wires bringing overnight orders from all sections. It appeared to be the general belief that the advance in the call rate and not surprise over the resignation of Frank A. Vanderlip as president of the National City Bank was the main reason for the sharp reaction yesterday. Bomb outrages were said to have had no effect upon operations. But they undoubtedly created nervousness in financial circles. It was said on Wall Street that the bombs had done the market good. It eliminated a great many weak holders. Bulls were sanguine that the upward movement would be resumed.

EARLY TRADING LESS ACTIVE.

After a few minutes the market grew comparatively quiet. Trading was less active during the first hour than during that period of the previous session. The strong group were motors, rails and shipping shares. A few specialties were active and higher. Rails and coppers were neither strong nor prominent. American Woolen common showed the largest gain. It advanced 4 points at noon and gave almost as its climb yesterday. It was up more than twelve points at the first hour today.

Steel started with a fractional gain, but soon lost the advance, and at noon was off half an hour was off on it. Motors were the most active group in early trading.

CALL RATES IN THE PAST.

At the highest on Tuesday call money was quoted at 11 per cent., the top rate for more than three years. The high record rate was established three days yearago being 15% per cent. on May 5, 1864. In the stock loan market late yesterday afternoon rates advanced. General list, 8 per cent. U. S. Steel common 8% per cent., and railroads, 6 to 7 per cent.

In regard to yesterday's New York market, a local financial publication says: "At least one new record was made—"closing" did not appear on the tape until 5:45, which was the end of twenty-five minutes late on May 7, 1915, when the Lusitania was sunk.

EAST BUTTE A FEATURE IN BOSTON

Local Market Irregular in Forenoon, With Trading Fairly Active

East Butte was an early feature in the local market, showing almost three points gain at its highest. It was active at times during the morning. Hedgeville was noticeable in that respect also and advanced a point, as did Stewart.

Low priced copper shares were firm as a rule, but a number of higher priced ones declined fractionally. Among those to show small losses were Copper Range, Cole Portland, Calumet & Arizona and Mohawk. American Bosch Magneto declined about United Shoe and Gray & Davis were among the active specialties. Packing issues were narrow in range and mixed as to price changes. American Woolen preferred sold at a new high record price.

The Boston market was irregular during the forenoon and business was fairly active. Call money had some breadth.

Boston banks have generally advanced the call loan rate to brokers from 6½ to 6 per cent. in reflection of the advances in New York.

COPPER METAL PRICE ADVANCED BY LEADERS

Leading copper interests have advanced their price for metal 1-16 of a cents a pound. There has been a revival of buying by large consumers. It is stated. Demand is only moderate, however. Nothing was heard from foreign buyers.

Smaller selling interests are asking 16½ cents for all deliveries. New buyers are said to include concerns which have held off for lower prices until their supplies were exhausted.

U. S. Steel Operations

It is stated at Pittsburgh that mills of the United States Steel Corporation are operating fully 75 per cent. of capacity, while those of the independent concerns are said to have been operating at between 65 per cent. and 70 per cent.

Does Divorce Mean Freedom?

Fact and Fiction Take Opposite Sides in Hearst's Magazine for June

Copyright, 1919, Star Company.

June, month of weddings, is here.

What is the greatest problem of woman as she contemplates marriage?

Is it the choice of a husband? Is it the prospective rearing of children? Is it, in the case of an unhappy choice, the question of divorce? Or, in the case of death, the desirability of remarrying, and when, and to whom?

Of course the bride does not think of all these things. Very likely she does not think of any of them.

She says, "I have the one man in the world"—a thousand say the same thing about totally different men.

She may realize that death waits around the corner, but she chooses to believe that it is a corner far away from where she stands.

Least of all, she thinks of any unhappiness. That she could love anybody but the young man of her present choice or that he could love anybody but her does not enter her mind.

Nor are these thoughts silly. The greatest and the least of the human race have had the same ideas. Some have been able to maintain them all their lives. Some have been awakened from their pleasant dreams.

Statistics show that in twenty years while, with the increase in population, the number of marriages scarcely doubled, the number of divorces tripled.

Gouverneur Morris has written for Hearst's Magazine a novel called "The Wild Goose," which discusses the question of divorce from an entirely new standpoint.

In the June number of the magazine there appears also one of the many letters the editors have received from readers of "The Wild Goose," who have either agreed or disagreed with the conclusions Mr. Morris reaches.

Facing each other, you have fact and fiction, and it is difficult to decide which has the greater truth.

Mr. Morris' contention is that divorce does NOT make the woman free. Duties devolve upon her that were formerly exclusively her husband's. She must be even more circumspect in conduct when divorced than when married if she would protect her name. He sums up the situation in the opening paragraphs of the June chapters as follows:

When Diana found that being free no more meant being free than being married had meant being bound, she began to see the world as it is more clearly than she had ever seen it before, and the spoiled child in her after a few violent protests and struggles curled up its wretched toes and died.

Even if she wished she could never recover the precious things which she had thrown away. And in spite of her decree of absolute divorce her life seemed still inextricably tangled up with her husband's. Diana was beginning to realize what a weight of responsibility the average decent American husband staggers under. All that responsibility had been shifted to her own shoulders and she found it most trying to carry.

The opinion opposed to Mr. Morris, written by a woman who signs herself as "N. B. O.," is printed under the title "Does It Pay to Quit?" a question naturally resulting from reading what this wife has written. Her opening sentences read:

I feel, after reading Mr. Morris' novel and the discussions on divorce in recent issues of Hearst's Magazine, that the other point of view is worth defending. For some people life solves itself, and these decide social and moral questions quite impersonally. I find men view these questions more abstractly than women. Perhaps their long economic freedom and social impunity have given them this independence. I can think of no situation in which the married state alone might affect a man's career. In my case this factor enters in, and as I view the case it all seems quite a man's world. But you may judge.

The recital of her story and the conclusions she draws and the plan of action upon which she determined make the "facts" as interesting as the "fiction" and as convincing, and prove both to be well worth the reading of men and women who are married and those for whom the orange flowers are just blossoming.

It would be interesting to hear from some of our married readers on these varying opinions. We shall be glad to refer their letters to Beatrice Fairfax or Mrs. Wilson Woodrow or to Nellie Bly for printing and discussion.

DON'T RAISE TOO MUCH OF A RUCTION

What do you do when you are asked to fill the breach and act in time of emergency?

Are you so spontaneous about it that you knock every other person and every other plan out of whack, do the most surprising things, and end by making a grand stir up without accomplishing what you were called upon to do?

Or do you recognize the opportunity only as one to express your own individuality, your own likes and dislikes, so that you offend more than you please, and perhaps spend the rest of your life wondering why you do not get another chance?

The sense of discrimination is valuable right here.

If you do not know by observation, find out the policy or custom of the one you must supplant temporarily, and then conform in the main, so that there won't be too much of an upheaval.

Some persons are proud and brag about the fact that they must do things their own way or they can't work.

Be prouder if you can step in and help out without the discovery being made that things are not as usual, and prove that you are a person of unusual wisdom and attainment instead of a doubtful diversion.

More Truth Than Poetry

MR. VAN WINKLE SETS THE PACE

By GENE FOWLER.

THE truth is out on Rip Van Winkle—
Rip had sense to spare.
He climbed the Catskills, gained a "rep."
The birdies twittered: "Watch your step!"
At figures, Rip was there.

NO tsetse fly bit Rip Van Winkle—
Rip had winning dope.
He chose the balmy out-of-doors,
Where none but sparrows heard his snores.
Ah, Rip knew ev'ry rope.

NO board bills worried Rip Van Winkle—
Tailors lost his card.
When prices soared, high, high aloft,
Our Rip was laughing: "Pretty soft!"
Although his bed was hard.

AND here's the plan that Rip Van Winkle
Tried for twenty years—
He slept while grasping landlords went
To Mrs. Rip to raise the rent—
And whipped the profiteers.

'TIS time we emulate Van Winkle—
Steal away from town.
And make our beds on sloping hills
Until the system cures or kills
And rents come tumbling down.

DEAR K. C. B.: Can you tell me why people who sing to themselves are said to be in a happy mood; and why people who whistle, although an annoyance to others, are also looked upon as being in a happy frame of mind; but people who converse with themselves—that is, talk to themselves in a kind of undertone—are said to be nutty?

This is a mystery to me, because quite often people who talk to themselves are chewing an idea or trying to solve a problem of which they are thinking very strongly. Sometimes, also, they are memorizing something.

What's your idea on the subject? Where is the psychology?

F. J. R.

MY DEAR F. J. R.
• • •
FROM WHAT you say,

I HAVE a suspicion.

THAT ONCE in a while
• • •
YOU TALK to yourself.
• • •
AND I am quite sure.

YOU ARE perfectly sane.
• • •
AND I wish I could tell you.

JUST WHY it is.

THAT SO many people.

HOLD THE foolish idea.

YOU WRITE about.

BUT I really can't.

ABOUT A couple of men.

WITHIN THE last month.

AND THE first I saw.

WAS IN a hotel.

IN ONE of the hallways.
• • •
ON AN upper floor.

AND I heard him first.
• • •
AND WHAT he said.
• • •
WAS THIS brief sentence.
• • •
"I GUESS I'll sit down."
• • •
AND JUST at that moment.
• • •
I TURNED the corner.
• • •
IN FRONT of the elevator.
• • •
AND HE was alone.
• • •
AND JUST sitting down.
• • •
ON A hallway bench.
• • •
AND I thought he was nutty.
• • •
TILL I found out later.
• • •
THAT HE owned the hotel.
• • •
AND WAS a very smart man.
• • •
AND THAT same week.
• • •
ON A railroad train.
• • •
GOING OUT to the suburbs.
• • •
ONE OF the passengers.
• • •
STARTED TO sing.
• • •
IN A very loud voice.
• • •
AND HE couldn't be stopped.
• • •
AND AT one of the stations.
• • •
THEY PUT him off.
• • •
AND CALLED a policeman.
• • •
AND THE brakeman said.
• • •
HE WAS a crazy guy.
• • •
WITH WHOM they had trouble,
• • •
ABOUT ONCE a month.
• • •
AND WHEN the train pulled out.
• • •
HE WAS fighting the policeman,
• • •
AND TRYING to sing.
• • •
BOTH AT the same time.

AND HE must have been crazy,

FOR IT can't be done.
• • •
AND THAT'S all I can tell you.

AND IF it helps you any,

YOU'RE WELCOME to it.

I THANK you.

SPARING THE CHILD VS. SPARING THE ROD

By Winifred Black

WHAT are you going to do to keep the average schoolboy from turning into a Bolshevik when he grows up?

Reason with him or whip him?

That's what they discussed at the National Education Association in Chicago the other day.

A woman from New York said that you spoiled the child if you ever let him see the rod. And a man from Buffalo declared that a boy who was never whipped never really had a chance to grow up to be a real man.

Both of these persons were experienced educators.

What are you and I, just everyday mothers and fathers, going to do about it? Which side are you on?

I'm with the woman from New York, and I'm afraid the reason I'm with her is that I am a conceited person with a dear love for my own self-respect. And I've always thought that if I didn't have sense enough and tact enough and patience enough and character enough to control a human being with less than half my age and experience, without resorting to physical force, I might as well go out and harness myself up with the horses or shut myself in with the cattle, and be a plain brute once and for all, and be done with it.

You've Seen These

I would never admit even to myself that a little bit of a boy, or a little bit of a girl either, had so much more character and more will power and more reason than I; that the only way I could manage them was to take a whip to them.

It doesn't take physical strength to rule children and make them mind. It takes common sense and a love of justice, and a love and understanding of children.

The mother who lets her children rule her is the worst enemy the children will ever have.

She is bringing them up with no real knowledge of the real conditions which they will have to face when they grow up.

A spoiled child is almost sure to turn out to be an unhappy man or a miserable woman.

Whenever I see a selfish, self-centred, egotistical, cold-hearted husband, I know that that man was a spoiled child.

Whenever I see a selfish, capricious, self-indulgent woman I believe that I see a woman who was once a spoiled child. And I blame her mother or her father or her grandmother or her aunt for a great deal of the misery she inflicts upon herself and upon others.

I have never yet in my life seen a high-tempered, discontented, morbid man, or a stubborn, tempestuous-hearted woman that there was not somewhere behind them a history of brutality, brutally inflicted in childhood, somewhere and by some one in what was supposed to be authority.

Let Rod "Spoil"

When you whip a timid, nervous, sensitive child you break the spirit of that child, and when he is grown to be a man he will be timid, sensitive and broken-spirited, and you will wonder why he doesn't get on better in the world.

When you whip a high-spirited, courageous, strong-natured child, you turn that child into a bitter-hearted rebel, hating you for your cruelty and laying up that hatred in his heart like an evil cancer that will eat and eat until there's nothing but the cancer left.

When I see women in the street car jerking their children into the car and throwing them into the seats—not because the child has done anything wrong, but because they themselves are in a hurry or out of patience—I don't wonder that the world is full of ill-natured, ill-conditioned people today.

JULIA TUCK FRENCH EXPLAINS—

Julia Tuck French gave up wealth and social position for a chauffeur husband. Now she regrets her "rash step." In a special article in next Sunday's paper she confesses that the "love-in-a-cottage" idea is impossible, and explains why a rich girl and a poor man can never be happy together. See the next

"The Time Has Come," But It Hasn't You Can't Raise the Roof Foundations Rise Slowly

—By Arthur Brisbane

(Copyright, 1919.)

Individuals who think that the world can be made better by separate murders made an interesting demonstration yesterday of their theories, and their weakness. In eight cities they operated. The result is two dead, one a watchman, member of the "proletariat," working for a living, and the other a bomb manufacturer.

"Holst by his own petard" is the appropriate quotation once used.

Mixed with fragraments of the dynamiter who accidentally killed himself were a number of printed sheets setting forth the dynamiter's idea and grievances.

The sheet contained this ancient saying: "The time has come when the social questions' solution can be delayed no longer. Class war is on and cannot cease but with a complete victory for the International proletariat."

A dozen times in every century for the past hundred centuries and longer individuals have decided that the time had come to settle all questions. But it hadn't. The slaves that built the Pyramids under the lash witnessed the execution of leaders that decided to stop the despotism of the Pharaohs. The Pyramids grew old, Cleopatra sailed past them, Napoleon made his celebrated remark about them, and still the social system didn't change.

The Gracchi, noble brothers, sincere idealists, felt that the time had come to change the world. It might have been changed, if the average human being had been as good as the Gracchi. But the time had not come. The Dark Middle Ages came, the French Revolution, and the Revolution of '48, and the Commune, and the Revolution here and the Civil War, and the Great War. Great bodies like the human race move slowly. The Stone Age lasted thousands of years. You must change the whole human race, you must raise your social structure from the bottom, from the lowest stone in the foundation. You cannot suddenly raise the roof, with dynamite or otherwise and effect any REAL change.

It is not the explosive force of nitro-glycerine, but the elevating force of public schools, public libraries, good books, intelligent men working for their fellows without hatred, with sympathy, that will gradually solve the problems.

It is a race poor, ignorant, undeveloped, selfish and brutal, from the man at the top who robs the weak, because he is cunning, to the man at the bottom who dynamites himself or a poor inoffensive watchman, because he is ignorant and bitter. Time, education, honesty, sincerity, patience, nothing else will do the work. They have done it through ages past, they are doing it now, they will finish the task in the long ages ahead of us. Agitation, wise or unwise, may stimulate thought, but thought alone and obedience to just laws will bring civilization. Civilization, like the individual, must climb the stairs one step at a time.

In the announcement that the dynamiters scattered you find this statement:

"The proletariat has the right to protect himself. Their press has been suffocated, their mouths muzzled, we mean to speak for them. The voice of dynamite, through the mouth of guns."

Wise men in government will not content themselves with calling such statements anarchistic, Kodaksonontafe, they will see to it that there is no justification, however slight, for the accusation that, with war ended, free speech is forbidden, so long as it stops short of incitement to crime.

Free speech enables government to locate trouble. Free speech hurts nobody except the man who talks foolishly. The suppression of free speech as we learned from Russia, during many years is accompanied always by the alternative, dynamite and terrorism.

Insanity must be dealt with by those thoroughly sane, and anarchy by those thoroughly obedient to law and respectful of law.

The newspapers print a good deal about the gambling madness in Berlin. Five million marks changed hands in a single night at some of the gambling clubs, it is said. More than that amount of money changes hands in a single minute in stock exchange gambling in this country. In addition to stock exchange gambling, which is legal, because the stock exchange and its percentage of legitimate transactions are a necessity, there is the race track gambling, declared illegal, but thriving as never before, because it suits influential men that enjoy gambling and need the money of gamblers to keep up their sport to ignore the law.
